The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Rising From The Ashes

A Firefighter And His Bride Honeymoon At Gurney's Inn In Montauk

By Dan Rattiner

At 9 a.m. on the morning of September 11, 2001, fireman Kevin Shea, 35, was just packing up to go home. His shift was over. He had put on his street clothes. Suddenly, on the second floor, he heard some of the men shouting that on TV they could see that a fire had broken out on the upper floors of one of the twin towers at the World Trade Center. An alarm went off. Shea stopped what he was doing and asked if he should get back into his gear and return to duty.

"No, it's not necessary," the dispatcher said.

Shea hesitated. From the street in front of the firehouse there on Amsterdam and 66th Street, he could make out smoke rising from the building downtown. And then there was more shouting. The second tower was on fire.

"Alright, Shea, you're in."

Shea normally travels on a truck called "a ladder." He was trained on it, and learned rescue, ventilation, search and forcible entry. But this time, because it took him a few minutes to change back into uniform, he found himself on the fire engine rig, which is used as a sort of central point for putting out fires.

Shea remembers the high-speed trip downtown, the bell clanging, the siren going. And he remembers being assigned to a group that went into the North Tower. But then he was called out to the north of the North Tower where some kind of fuel, aviation fuel they thought at the time, was causing fires to break out among parked cars in a parking lot under the West Side Highway. He remembers manning the hose, spraying water on the fire. And he remembers some of the men going off to find fire-fighting foam to contain the fire. And that's all he remembers until he woke up in a hospital in New Jersey.

> The ordeal he went through in front of the North Tower is nowhere... on his face. The truth is he remembers none of it.

I am talking to Shea on October 1, 2002, one year and twenty days since that terrible disaster, and he is sitting in a wicker chair on the deck at Gurney's Inn in Montauk, holding hands with the former Stacy Hope Herman, 38, the woman he married just two days ago. Shea is movie star handsome, and the ordeal he went through in front of the North Tower is nowhere to be found on the big smile on his face. The truth is he remembers none of it. He has no recollection that the people who found him thought he was dead. He doesn't remember being blown 150 feet from where he was manning the hose, suffering a neck broken in three places, a concussion, a torn rotator cuff, an injury that cut his right thumb three quarters of the way off and major damage to his leg and groin. Nor does he look like he has gone through this ordeal. His thumb has been re-

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Steven Spielberg of East Hampton took a phone call from Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien the other day. They talked for awhile and the Prime Minister said he really liked the movie Saving Private Parts. Spielberg pretended he heard that right and continued on quite socially. Spielberg would love to meet him soon, and so forth. The call had, in fact, come from a group that calls itself "the Masked Avengers" and calls celebrities pretending to be somebody important and tapes what is said. The calls are available on radiopranks.com and it all seems in fun. But no wonder celebrities have secretaries. The call ends with "Chretien" shouting "E. T. phone home.!"

After shaking out in Chicago, the Twyla Tharp musical Movin' Out based on the music of Billy Joel of East Hampton had its first preview the other night. The SRO crowd was dancing in the streets. The show is a thundering success.

More about Billy Joel. He has agreed to do a series of TV spots for the Long Island Convention and Visitors Bureau extolling the virtues of Long Island. He was asked to consider this after his recent Nassau Coliseum sold out concert which is part of his world tour. Joel said he had mixed feelings about asking more people to come out to the Hamptons for the summer, but he's a Long Islander first and foremost and would be happy to help out.

Documentarian Rory Kennedy of Shelter Island, the daughter of Robert and Ethel Kennedy, had a baby girl last week, who they named Georgia Elizabeth. Oh yeah – the husband? Mark Bailey. But a side show to this performance.

One of the greatest monologists of the last half century, Spalding Gray of Sag Harbor, (Swimming to Cambodia, Gray's Anatomy) has checked himself into a Manhattan hospital for treatment for depression. He has suffered from this illness ever since a terrible head on collision auto accident in Ireland in June 2001. The pivotal event was a suicide attempt involving jumping off the Sag Harbor – North Haven Bridge. Artist Ray Johnson died in a leap from there one cold winter night several years ago.

Peter Max, a sometimes Hamptonite, has designed his first poster for a university. The poster, which features celestial images, celebrates the 50th anniversary of MIT's Sloan School of Management.

The Hamptons International Film Festival is October 16-20 with events in East Hampton, Sag Harbor, Southampton and Westhampton Beach. There will be a ten year retrospective series this year and an emphasis on new and emerging actors.

Broadway singer/actor/dancer Joel Grey will be at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre on Saturday, October 12, to perform The Road to Cabaret. This is to be an intimate evening of music and conversation where the audience can ask Mr. Grey questions. A reception follows the performance. This is a benefit for Bay Street. Tickets are $100; call 631 725-0818.

Silvia Lehrer, cookbook author and Dan's Papers cooking columnist will be teaching fall cooking classes at the Siena Spirituality Center in November. For their catalogue and schedule of Silvia's classes call 726-4740.

Your moving company doesn't go the extra mile? Send them packing.

At Despatch Moving & Storage, we believe a moving company should do more than move your possessions. It should go the extra mile to ensure that your move goes off without a hitch. When you move with Despatch, it will. Quite simply, we pay as much attention to the little details as the big ones. You'll find this high level of service wherever you move. From Scarsdale to Sag Harbor. Manhattan to Montauk. Southampton to the South of France. Not happy with your moving company? Send them packing. Then call us.

Solid Wood Furniture Gallery

Laura Ashley Collections

Shopping for furniture can be confusing, especially when terms such as all wood, solid and veneer and solid wood are used.

KINCAID®
is the world's leading manufacturer of genuine solid wood furniture.

That's why we're known as Tomorrow's Heirlooms™.

Most manufacturers, even some of the best known and most expensive, use veneer over particle board. Be sure the beauty of your furniture is more than skin deep, ask for KINCAID® SOLID WOOD Furniture. For seating, ask for KINCAID® Custom Upholstery, built with the same dedication to quality.

attached. His neck is now made of titanium nuts and bolts, and he moves gently and wonderfully. He is, clearly, not in pain. He stands up, he sits down, he embraces his new wife. He is back at work on light duty. He is a miracle.

Stacy Hope Herman met her future husband on September 28, 2001, seventeen days after Kevin had been through this disaster. She had not known him before. Since the day they met, except for that first night, she has not been without him. Now she is on her honeymoon. She picks up the story.

"For four months before September 11," she says, "I had been making a 14-part documentary about the New York Fire Department Special Operations Command. I was born and raised on Long Island. But I went west to college, graduating from UCLA with a degree in science and film. I've produced numerous documentaries. And I didn't think anything would be so special about this one. I was nowhere near the towers when they fell. And I was not filming on that day. But about half the men and women in the department I had been working with died during that disaster and I was devastated. I decided to abandon the project.

"On September 28 I was home, still terribly depressed about everything, when a friend of mine from the fire department, Ray Bressingham, called me up and told me there is going to be a benefit for the firemen at a catering hall nearby and would I like to go. I tell him no. He said it would be good for you to get out, 'I'll pick you up at eight,' he said.

"Kevin' was at the benefit. He had a limp. He had a bandage around his right hand, a neck brace, and I asked Ray about him. After the first tower fell, a Daily News reporter on the scene was attracted by a large pipe that, at regular intervals, was emitting a puff of fire. Everything was covered in white powder. And he shouted that there was a man, unconscious but still moving alongside the pipe, and to get help. Paramedics came. They could see his neck was broken but they had nothing to immobilize it with. But they did have a stretcher. They took him to a nearby garage at which time the second tower collapsed. The garage saved them all. Then they brought him, still on the stretcher, and still without a neck brace, down to the docks where a boat took him across the Hudson to New Jersey and the hospital. The doctors said later that had his head turned in any direction just 45 degrees he would have been a paraplegic. It was a miracle. He was the only member of Engine 40, Ladder 35 to survive. He had only been out of the hospital three days. Ray said to me, 'Go over and give him a kiss,' and I did."

She also danced with him.

Stacy walked Kevin back to the firehouse that evening, then went to her own home. The next day she was back at his home. She volunteered to take him to his doctors' appointments. Wherever he needed to go, she would take him. And she did.

"I was in a great deal of pain that first morning after meeting Stacy," Kevin said, "in my groin. I

How, Over The Years, The Hamptons Turned Into Hollywood East

By Dan Rattiner

The first movie that was ever made in the Hamptons as far as anybody knows was the film The Sheik starring Rudolph Valentino. The year was 1921. Valentino, probably the most famous movie star in the world that year, came out to Montauk via the Long Island Railroad. Had he bumped by car or truck over the two lane roads that were the Montauk Highway that year, some paved, some dirt, it would have taken about seven hours. On the train, it took about three, just as it does today.

The set for this film — God only knows who decided on this set — was what we today call the Walking Dunes along the Napeague Strip, the closest thing to the Sahara Desert within a short distance of New York City available. It was also less than three hundred yards from the desolate railroad stop that existed back then between Amagansett and Montauk called Napeague. You got off the train here, walked north to the top of the dunes — there are half a dozen of them — and beyond the dunes, stretching down one mile to Peconic Bay (the Mediterranean?) were lower dunes, scrub bushes and sand — a perfect place to build an oasis with palm trees (brought on flatbed railroad cars) or a British fort (paper mache boulder brought out in a cattle car). Agnes Ayres co-starred with Valentino. There are still photos taken from this movie that show dozens of Arabs galloping along on horseback wearing white turbans and robes and swinging scimitars. There are British colonels with field glasses, rag-wrapped helmets and puttees peering into the distance and there are the two lovers — a makeup artist painted long lashes on Valentino's beautiful eyes — as he grips Ayres and bends her head backwards, an evil, lusty irresistible look in his eyes. The world loved it.

> Rob Lowe's Masquerade was made here... A small Chris Craft in that movie was actually blown up right off the Montauk Jetties.

The next movie that I know of, made almost entirely in the Hamptons, was made here for exactly the same reason. The East End, particularly Montauk, was in 1963 just as isolated and lonely as it was in 1921. A small plane, taking a spoiled and drunken movie star and her assistant from New York Harbor to Cape Cod is caught in a storm and forced to land on a supposedly uninhabited "island." The island is the dunes and the vast forty-mile long virtually uninhabited oceanfront beach of Montauk. But it is not uninhabited. Besides the occasional tourist (not filmed), there is an evil scientist with a heavy German accent (filmed) who pretends to be on the island doing ``scientific research" when in actuality he is creating a flesh devouring monster. Technically, though both movies are filmed in black and white, there is an advance in The Flesheaters over The Sheik. The Sheik is a silent movie. The Flesheaters is a talkie. Both films, by the way, were terrific successes at the box office, though The Sheik was the better of them.

The next movie anyone knows of made almost entirely in the Hamptons (if you skip over a film called The Drifters by Alex Matter that apparently was never released, and if you skip over Maidstone, a disastrous effort by Norman Mailer and Home Movie made by Andy Warhol which was also never released to the general public) was the Woody Allen movie Interiors, starring Diane Keaton, Geraldine Page and Maureen Stapleton made in 1978. Considered one of his less successful productions, it was filmed almost entirely in one lonely oceanfront home in Southampton, with actors who played the roles of very psychologically unbalanced people. It wasn't funny and it wasn't much of anything else. It was one of the few times that Woody Allen ventured out of his beloved New York City.

You will notice that the East End had not hosted any award winning film at this point and the reason is that it was not considered a center for film making or even for main residences of movie stars. It was a place to film something where you got away from everything. The best and most creative production people, producers and directors were not here at this time, or if they were here, it was just to get away from it all.

Perhaps the first film that broke through this barrier was director Sidney Lumet's Deathtrap, starring Christopher Reeve and Michael Caine in several venues in the Hamptons and Montauk, including the Montauk railroad station, and the main set, the interior of a mansion on Little Cobb Road in Water Mill. The house is still there on this street — it is about eighty years old and has a distinctive wooden windmill on the front lawn — and for some of the homicidal scenes in this film it was necessary to create thunder and lightning flashing on the exterior of this home, the operation of which caused power brownouts in nearby houses. It is an excellent movie and did quite well at the box office in 1982.

If Deathtrap encouraged filmmakers to believe that talented and successful people could be assembled in the Hamptons to make a successful movie, they were right. The film Sweet Liberty, made in 1986 by Alan Alda who has long had a home out here, starred him, Diane Cannon and Michael Caine and also had considerable success. The entire downtown of Sag Harbor was shut down for two days and nights so they could make this movie. There was a movie within a movie. The movie within the movie was the re-enactment of a particular battle of the Revolutionary War, which took place in a field that was the vast 40-acre front lawn of a religious retreat in North Haven. Sweet Liberty had a fine run at the box office and then an even greater run in the VCR and rental market.

There were a number of other movies made during this era — 1975 to 1990 — which had a script calling for their being made in the Hamptons, but which were not. Weekend at Bernie's was filmed on a remote island on the outer banks of North Carolina. Steven Spielberg's Jaws starring Roy Scheider and Richard Dreyfuss, a fabulous success, was originally set in the Hamptons in the Peter Benchley Book that inspired the movie, but after a brief attempt, wound up being made on Martha's Vineyard. Neither place is identified by name in the movie.

One of the first cable TV movies, made for HBO, was filmed here. It starred James Coburn and was called The Dain Curse. It was made, in full 1930 gangster mode, entirely on Shelter Island, especially around the old 1920ish hotel the Chequit. Many of the townspeople were extras in this movie and got to dress in period costumes. The movie was made in 1978.

Not many films after this were made entirely in the Hamptons just using it as a "set," probably because unless the movie was particularly supposed to be in the "Hamptons" the place was just too identifiable to serve as anything else.

Almost all of Rob Lowe's Masquerade was made here. It co-stars Meg Tilly (and there is a supporting role by Kim Cattrall). The plot is about a wealthy family and an inheritance in the Hamptons that leads to a murder gone wrong. A small Chris Craft in that movie was actually blown up right off the Montauk jetties.

There are scenes from the film Annie Hall made here, also Michael Douglas' Wall Street, and Network with Peter Finch and Faye Dunaway. There is a scene in the film The Devil's Own where Brad Pitt gets thrown through the window of a boathouse in Greenport. (It was performed by a stunt double.) Also, Michael Bay's Armageddon (1998) had a scene at the beach here as the meteor comes in, for which hundreds of people went to auditions held at the Amagansett Firehouse. This movie also has an unfortunate scene that shows a tidal wave washing over Manhattan and knocking down the Saddam Who?

If There Are Enough Doubles For Saddam Hussein It All Could Turn Out Fine

By Dan Rattiner

Apparently, Saddam Hussein has people in his employ who double as Saddam Hussein. The story was in Time magazine. Hussein is seen at the unveiling of a new statue of, uh, Saddam Hussein, and at the same time he is conducting a cabinet meeting at one of his palaces.

Well, it's a job. Hussein can't be everywhere, and particularly during tough times such as these it would be a very valuable thing for various Saddam Husseins to be seen everywhere while the real Saddam Hussein ducks down into a basement bedroom somewhere and hides under the bed.

"So. You are applying for the job of Saddam Hussein."

"That is correct."

"Please stand facing the camera. Your moustache is crooked."

"I can straighten it."

"You know we already have hired seven Saddam Husseins."

"You could make eight. People say I look like him."

"We only have a budget for seven."

"Are each of the other seven ready to die for Saddam Hussein?"

"Are you?"

"It would be an honor."

Yassir Arafat doesn't have a double for a very good reason. There is nobody on the planet that looks like him. The Palestinians have searched and searched. They can't come up with anybody. So Arafat takes his chances during the day and at night "never sleeps in the same place as he did the night before."

Mrs. Arafat, as you may know, is a very outspoken lady. She says what she wants, doesn't care what he says, is frequently seen telling him what to do and how to act. So it is hard to know whether he sleeps in different places every night because of her or the Israelis.

Being Mrs. Hussein — I think there are eleven Mrs. Husseins (all different looking) — is surely a very unsettling business. Each one takes care of a different palace, directing the servants to sweep up carefully around the scud missiles, and each one makes herself beautiful and primps in the mirror in the hopes of seeing — who?

> Having seven Saddam Husseins might save his life during a war, but it makes negotiating with him very difficult.

Having seven Saddam Husseins might save his life during a war, but it makes negotiating with him very difficult. He says one thing to Arafat and another thing to the United Nations inspectors and it turns out neither of them is the real him. What's a person to do?

It does make you wonder if some of the other players in the region have doubles or triples or stunt doubles. Hosni Mubarak of Egypt looks pretty typical and isn't hard to duplicate. Ariel Sharon has a practically cookie cutter look about him. As for Tony Blair of England, I think more than half the men in England could pass for him.

So George W. Bush agrees to meet with Saddam Hussein and comes back from the meeting disgusted and says it was Saddam Hussein the accordion player. He goes out again to meet with Ariel Sharon and comes back and says it was Ariel Sharon the game show host. Then it turns out George W. Bush is up in Kennebunkport, Maine, fishing with his dad and who has been going out to meetings is George W. Bush the building inspector.

The only way to resolve this would be to get all these imposters and originals together in the same room, or same stadium, maybe Yankee Stadium, and put boxing gloves on them and see who remains standing after two hours.

On the other hand, having all this chaos going on might be a very good thing. People sign agreements and other people run in and tear them up. Nobody knows who they are talking to. A general gets an order to fire a rocket with a payload of nasty chemicals and he can't figure out who it is who has told him to do that.

World War III is averted. Everybody gets up off the ring mat, and, with their anger all spent for the moment, shakes hands and slaps each other on the back happily and orders a beer. Peace is at hand.

Remember you read it first in Dan's Papers. Who was that who just walked by? • apologized to Stacy. I told her I had been out of the hospital for three days, and I had had parts of each of my testicles removed. Yet when I danced with her, I got a partial erection. And it caused me a lot of pain."

"I felt it," Stacy said, smiling.

``Well, I apologized for it," Kevin said. "But I thanked her for it, too. I know. This is an amazingly intimate thing to be talking about. But the whole thing was amazing."

I asked if each of them had been married before. They shook their heads. No.

"I held nothing back from Stacy," Kevin said. "She went into every doctor's office with me. Except the psychiatrist. She tried to get in, but he threw her out. On the sixth day, I told Stacy I wanted to spend the rest of my life with her."

"Whatever made you think that?" I asked.

Kevin looked at her. "She is steady. Emotionally healthy. No big highs and lows. I met and liked her family. And I had fallen in love with her. She hesitated when I told her. I said think about it. Think about it before you give me an answer."

"We're going to have children," Stacy said. Kevin nodded. "Give us two years. We'll bring them to you here in Montauk."

Kevin proposed to Stacy exactly six months from the day he met her. It was March 29, 2002. And he took her to Ground Zero, to the place where he had been found those long months ago, and he got down on one knee. He also dialed somebody on his cell phone, which he held out as he spoke.

"There are many people who say that they saved my life six months ago," he told her. "But the one who saved my life was really you." He took out a ring. "Will you marry me?"

"Listening on the phone were my parents," Stacy said. "Can you believe this? Here's the ring." She held it out.

Stacy and Kevin were married on Sunday at the Metronome, an art deco jazz club on Broadway and 21st Street. One hundred and seventy guests attended, including Stacy's best friends, who flew in from California and Florida, respectively. A rabbi performed the ceremony.

I spoke to them on Tuesday. They had been at Gurney's since Sunday, as guests of the Inn, courtesy of Ingrid Lemme, who's in charge of public relations and marketing for that splendid oceanfront resort.

I was at the Inn to have dinner with Lance Gumbs, one of the tribal chiefs of the Shinnecock Indian Reservation, and after I spoke with the Sheas, I suggested that Ingrid, Kevin and Stacy join us. But Kevin and Stacy were just sitting there, holding hands and smiling at one another.

"Let's just make it us three," Ingrid said. "They're newlyweds. They don't need us."

And so we were three. And they were two. And this was the most extraordinary thing. •

Talking To The Borons

I Think That Jacket Will Create An Egthu That Could Make You Uncomfortable

By Dan Rattiner

In northeastern India, they speak a language called Boro. It's not one of the major Indian languages. All together about 300,000 people, in several mountain valleys, speak it. But of course, because it is there, lexicographers come and catalogue it and translate it into their native languages. How else is anyone going to be able to speak to these people if they don't know the language?

What's extraordinary, though, is how difficult it is to translate Boro. A list of some of the Boro words, translated into English by lexicographer Mark Abley, has been circulated. You thought Yiddish was hard? You thought Chinese was hard?

ZUM: To wear or put on clothing for the upper part of the body.

BUNHAN BUNAHAN: to be about to speak, and about not to speak.

EGTHU: To create a pinching sensation in the armpit.

GABKHRON: To be afraid of witnessing an adventure.

GAGROM: To search for a thing below water by trampling.

SERROM: To examine by slight pressing.

Sample usage:

I'm going to zum that blouse.

It was important to get somebody to help this man but I went Bunhan Bunahan.

I've been looking for a woman who might enjoy a little egthu.

I don't ski, and I got invited to Aspen for the weekend, but I'm gabkhron, so I declined.

We went clamming. I was gagromming around.

This big dead whale washed up in Amagansett. I was over there and serromed it a bit.

You probably know that when white men first got here, the American Indians had no concept of land ownership. The white men offered to buy some land from them for a bunch of furs and beads. Sure, the Indians said.

I've heard that Chinese is complicated, but I don't know that language. I do know a bit of Yiddish, and indeed the nuances of that language are great. I was in a "Jewish" deli in San Francisco called THE NEW YORK BAGEL and it was such a phony. Shlep home a bag of bagels, a sign said. Wrong.

Shlepping isn't done with a bag of bagels. Shlepping is walking a hundred yards, carrying maybe nine bags of a dozen bagels each, two paper bags of gallon-size glass bottles of cold orange juice which will shortly get the bag damp and crash to the ground, a set of car keys in one hand, a dog leash attached to a Great Pyrenees in the other hand, two hot cups of hot coffee to go, one held between the upper arm and body, the other carried by suspension, the plastic lid wedged between the upper and lower teeth with the hope the bottom doesn't fall out.

Shlepping is not lugging, which is done by between two and four strong men working hard and successfully, nor is it hauling, which is usually done by a man driving a tractor trailer truck. One does not haul home a bag of bagels.

Besides which, the damp climate of San Francisco does not allow them to make anything but soft chewy bagels. Real bagels, at the New York Bagel Cafe, anyway, would have to be flown in from New York.

But I digress.

I had lunch the other day with a woman from a small town in the Midwest, and I was telling her about the disgraceful practice of booting cars that we now have in the Hamptons. The practice started in East Hampton, and has now spread to Southampton, Sag Harbor and Amagansett. She was staring at me peculiarly, her mouth half open. Was this done in rainy weather? Did they have car size umbrellas too?

The next night, at dinner, I got into a gentlemanly argument with a woman about the word "precocious." The woman was Marilyn Sokol, the actress. She had referred to a friend's daughter as a precocious child. But she was using it as in "advanced in development for her age."

"Precocious doesn't mean that," I said. "A precocious child is one who might do something creative or offbeat, such as toss your sneaker out a sixth-story window."

"That's not what it means at all," she said. "It means advanced for her age, like I said. Precocious would be a four-year-old successfully taking classical piano lessons."

We simply disagreed. She offered to bet me. I declined. Two other people were at the table and one agreed with Marilyn and the other shrugged his shoulders. But he was Russian, so what does he know?

At another point in the dinner Marilyn got up, made a phone call at a payphone and came back with a definition somebody on the other end of the line had read to her from a dictionary. Or that's what she said. I didn't believe her. I scoffed and told her I thought she was making this up.

All in all it was a real doohickey of a discussion. •

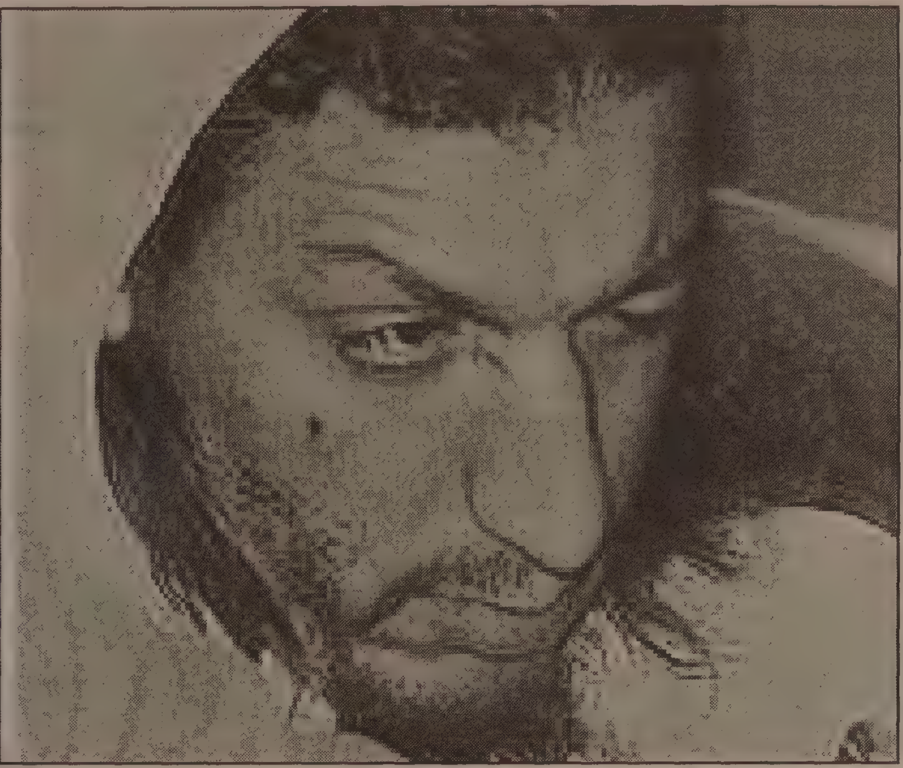
John Walker Lindh



Richard Reid

Plug Ugly

Why One Islamic Terrorist Did Okay And Another Gets The Max

By Dan Rattiner

The trial of Al Queda member John Walker Lindh is over. He got twenty years in jail for being part of an enemy that wanted to slash American's throats and kill women and children.

At first, it seemed obvious that this bearded man, found in the basement of a makeshift prison in northern Afghanistan where Al Queda members were being temporarily held, should be shot, either on the spot, or later by a military tribunal for his activities. But then they shaved off his beard and cut his long hair and lo and behold he was a handsome fellow indeed, a Caucasian, an American from a nice California family, and somebody you'd be happy to meet just about anywhere.

Of course, there was all the e-mail he sent his parents noting his friendship with Osama Bin Laden, describing his bloodthirsty activities as a soldier of Islam and hinting that he might come home one day when enough people in America had been killed and our way of life had collapsed. Didn't matter. It was twenty years he got, probably twelve actually if he was on good behavior. He'll be out of jail when he's in his late thirties. He cried.

Now, hard on the heels of the Lindh trial comes the trial of another terrorist, Richard Reid. Reid is an Englishman and another convert to Islam and he's the one who tried to kill 197 people on board a Paris to Miami flight last December 22 by lighting a bomb he had hidden in his shoe while they were over the Atlantic. People smelled the smoke from the lighted match, overpowered him and tied him to his chair until police could take him off the plane. Reid is very ugly. He has beady, suspicious eyes, a long hook nose that makes him look like a pirate, and a sneer on his mouth. Though he killed nobody — Lindh's friends killed an American reporter shortly after the reporter conducted an interview with Lindh — the recommended sentence for Reid is 60 years in jail. Even with good behavior, he will be still be an old man when he gets out.

My theory is that because Reid is ugly, it cost him forty years. Ugly gets the short end. You can make a pretty good case for this.

My theory is that because Reid is ugly, it cost him forty years. Ugly gets the short end.

Let us look at another case of terrorism against America, the case of the Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh. Rarely has there been anyone as typecast as an ugly, nasty, evil person as has Timothy McVeigh. He had a long, thin face, thin lips, the same shifty eyes as Richard Reid. He got put in an electric chair and they fried him. My theory is that if he looked like Tom Cruise he'd have been spared. I am probably right.

We step on spiders, run from rats and snakes but pet bunnies and dote over poodles. It is no secret that in the movie world when you are going to have an evil alien you start designing from an oversize crustacean and go on from there. Of course friendly aliens such as E. T. are cute and pet-able.

Our society has gone to great lengths to fight for the rights of the disadvantaged and endangered. One must not make disparaging comments against minority groups, people with different religious beliefs, people with different sexual orientations or people of different color. But it doesn't say ugly in there. Ugly people know. And there's just nothing they can do about it. When they elect Miss America, they don't look for women with buckteeth and fat thighs.

Along these lines, it is interesting to note that when something is really cute and really dangerous it has to be pointed out to people. People relax with handsome and cute. They are on guard with ugly and suspicious. Therefore little children have to be warned not to go too near swans. Graceful and handsome they are. You'd think they'd be just fine to pet. But just try and they'll take a good chunk out of your fingers. Can't have that.

What seems to drive all this is something inbred, something that has to do with the evolution of the species. You can hook up with something ugly, but the next generation could be ugly. You can hook up with something pretty, and the next generation will be knock your socks off handsome. It's been argued that this is not really so, that different cultures have different definitions of what is handsome or beautiful. If you look at it more closely, though, you find this is not the case. Tall, slender, graceful, high cheekboned, long-limbed, narrow-waisted women, no matter where on the planet they are from, know exactly who they are.

There are some morals here.

One is that if you are plug ugly, smile a lot, keep to the Ten Commandments and stay out of trouble.

Another is that liposuction and plastic surgery have a lot to recommend them. So do well fitting clothes, perfume and nice makeup.

Another is the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the laws of this great nation of ours don't extend to the ugly.

Still another is that the environmentalists who want to save endangered species get a lot more done when who they want to save are the deer, the bunnies, the Willy the Whales and the stray dogs. They do worse with lobsters and scorpions, rats and aliens who have landed here, regardless of how few of them remain back on their home planets, who look like giant soft-shelled crabs.

Finally, and this is just my opinion, but if a handsome, square jawed man is running for President against a little runt of a guy, vote for the runt. He may not be as good looking, but if he knows the rules and hasn't been too bent out of shape with psychological problems about his runtness, he'll be a straight shooter.

Whatever happened to that awful looking Islamic looking blind religious leader from New Jersey who proselytized blowing up the World Trade Center? He had those spooky, unseeing glazed eyes. I do hope he is dead. •

Contamination Around The Millstone Nuclear Power Station

The Star Foundation has just released a report on chemical and radiological sampling performed in the marine environment in the area surrounding Millstone Nuclear Power Station on Long Island Sound. Samples of Hydrazine and Uranium were discovered in the Millstone area. New York State Assembly member Fred Thiele and Senator Ken LaValle set in motion testing through a New York State Grant.

Hydrazine is likely to collect in fish and may have negative effects on people who consume seafood from the area. It has been reported by the federal government that Hydrazine may cause cancer, birth defects central nervous system and immunological disorders, especially in children. A few signs to look for that may be caused by consuming small amounts of hydrazines are: nausea, vomiting, uncontrolled shaking, and inflamation of the nerves, drowsiness, or coma.

The Vinland Map

A Map Of The New World Before Columbus? Science Says Yes

By Jerry Cimisi

What do the Vikings, Carbon-14 dating, an Italian art dealer from the 1950s and a scientist from Brookhaven National Laboratory have in common? The answer is the controversial "Vinland Map," a cartography rendered on parchment that shows Europe, Greenland, Iceland and the eastern coast of Canada (on the map it's named "Vinland"). Some scientists now say, the map was drawn about sixty years before Columbus made that famous trip west in 1492.

"We were able to date it pretty tightly," said Garman Harbottle, a nuclear scientist at Brookhaven lab, "to 1434. So it's very possible that Columbus, when he made his voyage, had knowledge of such maps."

Harbottle, who helped prepare a specimen of the parchment on which the map was drawn for dating, was one of the three scientists who worked on the project.

The Vinland Map has generated controversy among experts since it surfaced in Europe in the 1950s, the property of an Italian rare book dealer who was reticent to say how he had come by this startling acquisition. It has alternately been considered proof that Vikings, the daring Norsemen, had visited the New World before Columbus, or a brilliant forgery. It was thought that the book dealer had taken the map without permission from a collection he had been called to peruse.

"Some think it was from a Spanish collection, possibly in the cathedral of Burgos," said Harbottle in a recent interview. It was Spain, of course, who had financed and equipped Columbus on that history-making voyage. Spain (along with Columbus's native Italy) would have an interest in seeing Columbus continue to be regarded as the European discoverer of the New World.

Of course, by now, it seems quite certain the Vikings were indeed on the shores of the New World long before Columbus, by perhaps as much as 500 years. It was this history, part legend, part fact that in the late 1980s, drew Harbottle into working on the Vinland Map.

Harbottle related that at Hunter College he met with a number of experts from Copenhagen along with the Smithsonian's Director of Arctic Studies. "The Danes were interested in subsidizing archeology projects that concerned the Norsemen in North America," said Harbottle.

Garman Harbottle examines the Vinland Map

"For instance, they got involved with determining the true nature of the Newport Tower in Rhode Island. It's a stone tower, about two stories high, that was rumored to have been left by the Vikings. It turned out this was a garden ornament built by a wealthy Englishman who once had an estate there. It was something that used to be called a 'folly': an artificial ruin that people used to put in their gardens.

> It seems quite certain the Vikings were indeed on the shores of the New World long before Columbus, by perhaps as much as 500 years.

"Then there was the silver penny, in other words, a coin, that had been found in Maine and which has been dated to well before Columbus, to around 1060.

"I was asked what I would like to study. I said, 'The Vinland Map.' By that point in time it had come to be owned by Yale University. I recruited a colleague of mine, Jacqueline S. Olin of the Smithsonian. Over the next few years we submitted several proposals to Yale but were turned down each time — though Yale never closed the door. They said we had no radiocarbon dating experience."

Eventually, in 1995, Harbottle, Olin and another colleague, Douglas J. Donahue of the University of Arizona got their foot in the door. But they had to pass a test. Harbottle said, "We were given five parchments, notary documents from Florence, to date. The dates of these documents were known. We successfully dated four out of five. They were from the 1400s. So in 1995, we got the go-ahead with the Vinland Map."

Harbottle explained radiocarbon dating. "The map is on parchment, made from the skin of a sheep. All living things, such as animals and trees, use carbon." The carbon that is utilized by life on Earth, is, overwhelmingly, Carbon-12. The number comes from the total of neutrons and protons in the nucleus of the carbon atom.

Harbottle went on, "But for every 100 quadrillion Carbon-12 atoms in a living thing, there is one atom of radioactive Carbon-14."

Simply put, Carbon-14 is an isotope of "normal" carbon, or Carbon-12. "Isotope" comes from the Greek word meaning "same place." Simply put, an isotope of an element merely differs from that element in its radioactivity. Science chose the term "isotope" because these variations of elements went into the "same place" in the periodic table of elements.

Isotopes born of radioactive disintegration had been discovered just before World War I. This had been a great shift in science's perception of atoms, which, up until then, had been considered the smallest part of matter that did not undergo any change.

All radioactive elements have what is called a half-life: that is, a period (it could be seconds or thousand of years, depending on the element) in which half of the radioactive isotope has decayed. This is how Carbon-14 dating is used to measure the age of bones, paper, parchment, etc. The rate of decay of an isotope is constant, Harbottle said, so there is no question that more or less radioactive atoms may decay in one period of time as compared to another.

It was slow going at first with the Vinland map.

The Sheltered Islander

#220 Counterattack

Environmentalists tell us that everything in nature has a purpose. The balance of nature would be altered with unforeseeable consequences if one creature were removed.

What a crock! New species develop and become extinct all the time. And not everything in nature has a reason for existing. Specifically, there is no reason for ants.

I was enjoying a cup of morning coffee. I was sitting eye level to the kitchen counter and the sun was hitting the counter so I could see everywhere I wiped with the sponge and everywhere I missed. I missed one Sugar Smack, one tiny, cute tan-with-brown-speckles, sugar-coated Sugar Smack in the middle of the counter.

From out of nowhere, one teensy ant appeared. These ugly beasts have no eyes, no ears, a one-cell brain, and yet still, on the whole counter, clean but for the one Sugar Smack, this little s.o.b. found it. I watched him as he circled it, taking measurements no doubt. I guess I'm supposed to believe he somehow records this with his antenna. I knew he was reconnaissance. He headed back to the edge of the counter and disappeared into a fine crack by the window. I waited because with my infinitely greater intelligence, I knew what he was doing. He was organizing a Sugar Smack attack. Sure enough, a few minutes later, the posse arrived. Twenty-two ants in a single-file line, they traversed what must have been the human equivalent of five miles in thirty seconds. They surrounded the lone smack and climbed all over it. Doubtless they were trying to figure out how to get it home.

I laughed at these fools. I already knew, with my billion-celled brain, that what they were now contemplating was impossible. It would be like twenty-two people dragging a zeppelin five miles and then pushing it through a turnstile.

Then, two ants left the scene and went back to the crack. I watch "Law & Order" every day, so I'm quite in tune with the criminal mind and I knew there was going to be a new development of some sort. Would they bring a cart? No, because they haven't even discovered the wheel yet. Would they bring instruments to slice and dice the sugar smack into manageable pieces? No, because they have no hands to carry them with. All they could do is what they did.

They brought back more ants, a lot more.

I watched a steady stream of ants emerge from the wall and create a solid black thread from crack to Smack. They joined the initial posse, circling the Smack and climbing up and down on it, all the while hoping that one of them would come up with an idea. The foolish toils of men are exceeded only by the vain and grandiose toils of ants. I kept watching and I was right (of course), not one of them had a clue.

Now several ants went back to the crack. "Why?" you ask? My very question, "Why?" say I. Even if by some miracle, they could drag it across the counter, they'd never get it through the wall. But, that's the advantage of having eyes isn't it? I could SEE it wouldn't work, but they were doomed to try.

Another black thread of ants crossed the counter and joined the others. One ant tripped and hurt his leg. He was taken out of line and carried back by four others, his legs flailing in the air. I've always wondered why ants carry their dead and wounded home. They don't have any medical knowledge. There's no point in burying their dead since they all live underground anyway. I decided it must be a Soylent Green situation. I bet they eat their dead. That's why the wounded one was flailing his legs, he wasn't in pain, he was scared to death and trying to escape. Barbarians.

The battalion of ants, numbering at least five hundred by my reckoning, swirled around the Smack creating a shiny, fluid, black ring around the voluptuous, ecru colored puff. It looked like an artwork by Cristo. I realized at that moment that since none of them could think of how to get the Smack to the crack, one of them had thought of canceling the mission and having a company picnic on my counter. They were obviously going to eat it on site. In broad daylight, right in from of me!

They were going to gnaw on this Sugar Smack, get a sugar rush, get a little loose, start feeling each other's antenna, and you know where that leads. I was going to have to watch ants have sex on my counter. Hey, I don't even get to have sex on my counter! And it's the perfect height for it. I've been praying for a tall man for about six years now. I keep my counters clear for a reason. If ANYONE is having sex on my counter, it's gonna be me!

I was out of my chair in a flash. I grabbed the sponge and in one powerful sweep of my hand I ended the orgy before it began. Hundreds of crumpled ants swirled down the drain along with their precious Sugar Smack. I sealed the crack in the wall with red nail polish. Now I sit at my table and gaze over at the streak of red by the window and relax in the knowledge that although I'm not the queen of much anymore, I am still the queen of my kitchen. No man or ant, has yet been born that can take that from me.

Twin Towers.

And then, shortly thereafter, there was another film made almost entirely in the Hamptons that never got released. It was called Mr. Spielberg's Boat and it never got released because Mr. Spielberg, who does not have a giant yacht anything like the one portrayed in the movie, got a restraining order to prevent its release. It was filmed almost entirely in Sag Harbor.

There have been several films made here that involve family reunions to see the elderly patriarch or matriarch of a rich family for the last time. These include Rocket Gibralter (1988) starring Burt Landcaster and Last Summer in the Hamptons (1996) starring Viveca Lindfors.

In my mind, the most fascinating movie ever made on the East End was Ed Harris' film Pollock, recounting the years in dramatic and gripping tale of the troubled life of the celebrated painter Jackson Pollock. Made in 2000, the film received two Academy Awards, and was historically about as accurate as a film can be. I have seen it half a dozen times. It will be some time before there is another one like this.

Considering everything, it seemed perfectly natural to launch the Hamptons International Film Festival here in 1993. It started modestly. I was approached, as were numerous other people, by a woman named Joyce Robinson, a casting agent, who had come to own a house on Skimhampton Road in East Hampton after going through a divorce. She thought the town was a nice place to raise her son but regretted her various forays off to Hollywood. She had this idea that if she didn't want to go to Hollywood that, she might found a film festival and have Hollywood come to her.

When she approached me about it, my first thought was a question — which was "What is a Film Festival?" since I hadn't been in the middle of one before, and when she answered this I had a seconed question which was why hasn't anybody done this before here?

The film festival was a success from the get go, and though Mrs. Robinson was essentially overwhelmed by her creation and soon left the running of it to others and shortly after that left town to follow other pursuits. The festival thrived and helped launch the careers of several filmmakers and actors during the last ten years including Selma Blair, Russell Crowe, Steven Soderbergh, Ryan Phillippe and Julia Stiles.

Held in October, it has extended the busy summer season for at least a month and a half, and has brought into town Hollywood people with some of the loudest shirts and most seductive sunglasses I have ever seen for its five day run. Attendance now runs upwards of 20,000 and more than 50 films are shown in a dozen different categories in theatres in East Hampton, Southampton, Sag Harbor and Westhampton Beach with lectures and classes at such venues as Guild Hall in East Hampton. I also think it is fair to say that some of our more recent arrivals in the film business have considered the film festival on the plus side when deciding whether to move here or not. I can think of Barry Sonnenfeld, Kim Cattrall and Sarah Jessica Parker, Jerry Seinfeld, Marissa Tomei and a host of others.

Denise Kasell now runs the festival and she is in her fifth year here and she has many surprises for us from October 16 to October 20. Our towns are full of life, art, beauty and creativity as producers, actors, theatre bookers, rights agents, directors and critics mix and mingle to vote on the best independent films of 2002. It's an exciting time and I hope you enjoy it as much as I do.

We could have, after all, had an Accountant's Convention come our way rather than a Film Festival. Hmmmm. •

Uranium is also a health concern if consumed through eating seafood caught in this location.

"This finding clearly validates government and community concerns with regard to radioactive pollution in waters surrounding the Millstone Nuclear Power Plant," said Senator LaValle. "The accumulation of Hydrazine and Uranium in our local waters and marine life is deeply troubling and presents a serious hazard to public health. It is critical to the protection of our natural resources and the public health that we continue investigating efforts into the extent of the pollution and, most importantly, target the source to eliminate further discharge of these deadly toxins into our waters."

A three and a quarter inch thin triangle was first cut from the parchment. But there proved to be a difficulty with this sample, as the scientists found it was heavily covered or permeated with a shellac or another unknown coating, that interfered with the radiocarbon dating process.

"We learned how to clean it up," said Harbottle. "The coating of the parchment was soluble in an acetone solution. To show you how heavily the parchment was coated — when we cleaned it up, we found we lost thirty percent of the weight of the sample."

Essentially, Harbottle and Olin worked on cleaning samples for testing, Douglas, at the University of Arizona, did the radiocarbon testing.

Just as it took the scientists a number of years to be allowed to test the parchment of the Vinland Map in the first place, it took some time to get results and then to have them published. "We submitted to a number of journals," said Harbottle. "One journal said, well, you may have proved the parchment itself is before Columbus, but that does not prove the map itself was drawn on the parchment at that time."

Harbottle admitted this was possible, though the fact that that parchment does date to before Columbus lends a high probability that the map does, too. The result of the work of the three scientists was finally published in the July, 2002 issue of the journal Radiocarbon.

Harbottle thinks that the age of the parchment and that of the map relate directly to the Church's Council of Basel that was held over nearly two decades, from 1431-1449. "The Church wanted maps of the known world in order to preach the Gospel."

Harbottle was not merely linking two events — the radiocarbon date and the date of the Council — because they fall within the same period. Evidence of the Council of Basel's link to turns up in the following way: When Yale came into possession of the Vinland map, the map was bound in a binding that was clearly from the 19th century. Harbottle said, "Lawrence Witten, a rare book dealer who dealt with Yale, had two centuries old works: The Tartar Relation, about the journey of two European monks who preached to the Tartars, and Vincent of Beauvais, a history book from the 1400s. When Witten came to put these two books together with the Vinland Map, he found that the wormholes in them matched. In other words, all three of these must have been bound together at one time."

In 1965, Yale University published The Vinland Map and the Tartar Relation, setting out the full text of the monks' journeys and a discussion of questions about the map's authenticity. After the book was published, the binding of Vincent of Beauvais was taken apart, and hidden in the binding boards was a mirror image (created by the impress of ink) of a page dealing with the Council of Basel. With the wormholes indicating the map was bound with two other works of the 1400s, and one of the works coming in contact with a document of the Council, this lent credence to a connection between the Council and the map.

"What we're really after," said Harbottle, "is the state of knowledge in Europe at the time of Columbus. If he sailed west across the ocean only supposing what he might find, it is one thing. If he had seen the Vinland Map, or other maps showing there was land there, westward, that is a very differently matter, not only practically but psychologically." •

FRIARS HONOR CHEVY CHASE

Some funny and raunchy comedians got together as The New York Frairs Club honored Chevy Chase in the Grand Ballroom of the NY Hilton. Chevy is only the second man to be roasted by the Friars twice. The other was the legendary Milton Berle. Roastmaster Paul Shaffer kept things moving at a brisk pace and the jokes were definitely down and dirty. Lisa Lampanelli was outrageously over the top, but how Comedy Central will air this stuff on December 1st is beyond me. Tune in and see what you can get away with on cable TV, but be warned this is not PG.

RITA HAYWORTH GALA

Photos and Text By Patrick McMullan

Over 700 of the New York's best and brightest filled the Waldorf Astoria's Grand Ballroom for the 18th Annual Rita Hayworth Gala on Thursday evening, October 3. Andrea Stark was this year's Gala Chair. As always, the gala theme was inspired by one of Rita's movies; so for this year's theme – The Lady From Shanghai, the ballroom was transformed into a 1920's Chinese nightclub. General Chair Princess Yasmin Aga Khan welcomed the guests in her stunning black and gold kimono-style evening dress by Naeem Khan who also designed Honoree Margo Catsimatidis's remarkable red beaded dress. This year's gala raised over $1.5 million for Alzheimer's research.

THE INCREDIBLE PHOTOGRAPHY OF GREENPORT'S BOB MCINNIS

By Susan Whitney Simm

When I first saw the work of photographer Bob McInnis at JD Smith Gallery in Greenport, I was convinced that it was somehow artificially enhanced. The vibrant and lavish colors, at times reminiscent of Maxfield Parrish and at others of illustrator N.C. Wyeth, look larger than life with their brilliant hues. Surely they must be hand-colored or digitally altered.

"Nope," said Jeannie Smith, the gallery's owner. "It's the real thing. In fact, Bob is my only resident artist whose work I personally sought after seeing it at a real estate office here in Greenport."

The real estate office was Century 21 and the owners, Bob and Linda Scalia, saw Bob's work on his website as they were browsing the Internet. They have since purchased ten large images for their office. It was a big break here on the East End for Bob, who has achieved exposure and received commissions as a result of the Scalias' purchase. But I was still curious as to how he achieves his spectacular color, so I called and arranged an interview to find out.

In person, Bob is charming and eloquent. Born in a small town outside of Boston, his interest in photography began in earnest at the age of thirteen when he convinced his parents to invest in a darkroom. He has maintained a life-long love of the art, but Bob has been a professional photographer for only the last six years, having previously taken a lengthy detour into advertising. These days, he and his wife, Jean, are still independent consultants, traveling – along with their one-year-old son, Joseph – throughout the country to present seminars to daily newspapers.

"After I graduated from Darmouth, I landed in Buffalo as a sales manager of ten weeklies," said Bob recently at his beautiful, turn-of-the-century Greenport home. "By the time I was 30, I had started speaking on sales and design at conferences on advertising." Then someone from Newsday saw Bob at a conference and offered him the training position at the daily. It was there that he met Jean.

"Newsday is a great organization, but I realized after a while that I wasn't cut out for the corporate lifestyle, and when a friend suggested consulting, I thought it sounded great." He and Jean have since traveled extensively to work for major newspapers – such as the Hartford Courant and the Honolulu Advertiser – and moved out to the East End from Huntington six years ago, when Bob bought a Pentax 67, some Fuji film and began shooting every chance he got.

"My major in college was called Policy Studies. It was an experimental, interdisciplinary major that was designed to make one a better decision maker. And believe it or not, there's a lot of decision making involved in photography."

But are his spectacular results really natural? "People always think that my images are digitally manipulated or enhanced. But I feel that there should be a scared trust between the viewer and photographer. I know that the lines are blurred these days and with black and white they're dodging and burning all over the place! I've even heard that Ansel Adams' work is nothing like it is in the negative. On the other hand, I think that there are certain things the viewer expects with color work. I want to be able to look at my work and say, this scene exists. This is real. I think if I manipulated my images, the argument could be made that I'm betraying the trust of the viewer."

> "Someday I'll be standing at the sight with a handheld looking at the clouds above me… Here comes a cloud… I can see it coming…Ready, aim…"

One of the secrets to how Bob achieves his marvelous color – one of his hallmarks – is timing. He often waits until the sun is almost set. "The sun's rays are going through more atmosphere at that time of day and it makes things look warmer." In addition, Bob has taught himself how to look for the colors. This is especially true in "5th Street Beach, Greenport," a photograph so vibrant it looks like it sprang from the pages of National Geographic. "I knew that these primary colors, red, green and blue, would work," said Bob. "This was taken just seconds before the sun set."

Another of Bob's images I love is of grapevines in the snow. He says that he's gotten some static about this image because it deviates from his usual utilization of color, but I like it for that very same reason. Everyday here on the North Fork we're treated to views of grapevines, but by capturing them in newly-fallen snow, Bob presents us with a different way of seeing those vineyards around us.

"During the last few years I've figured out what works and what doesn't for me. I'll go off many nights without film and not shoot anything. I look, not only for the emotional response, but also for where it's coming from. As in this image" – he points to "Tide Up," a popular image of one of two very well-documented dinghies on Dam Pond in East Marion. "Is it coming from the water, the grass, the boat?"

Another of Bob's favorite images is that of the Camp Quinipet gazebo taken at sunrise from the water. "I'm standing out in the water, in waders (something he frequently does to get his shots). You get fog in the morning that burns off very early. I watch the weather forecast all the time." He even subscribes to weatherunderground.com so he can track the clouds and fog as they approach.

"I know before I leave the house where the clouds are coming from. Someday I'll be standing at the sight with a handheld looking at the clouds above me… Here comes a cloud… I can see it coming…Ready, aim… You laugh," he says

With Susan Simm

NOT THE LAST WORD ON CHARDONNAY

The beleaguered Chardonnay – it just became too popular for its own good, an old story – is once again rising from the ashes here in Long Island wine country. The wine we (or at least some of us) love to hate is undergoing a transformation that is far more food friendly than those old over-oaked Chards of the late 80s and 90s and those often relentlessly austere, stainless steel fermented wines of recent years. For a while there it seemed as if we traded in a mouthful of splinters for a mouthful of metal. But now the pendulum is finding its center and a bunch of recent releases are reflecting this trend. L.I. Chardonnay is becoming, once again, the darling that food loves to befriend.

Crispness and a nice balance of steel and oak are the hallmarks of the new breed. Castello di Borghese's 2000 Chardonnay is steel fermented and aged in French oak barrels for 10 months. The resulting wine has a welcome complexity and pairs very well with the upcoming season's heartier fare. I also enjoy it as an aperitif. Available at the winery for $13.

Martha Clara's 2000 Estate Reserve Chardonnay, released in June of this year, is a triumph of class and elegance. This big, Burgundian-style wine has lots of fruit – especially ripe pear – and a lively, perfectly balanced but not overwhelming acidity, achieved by undergoing malolactic fermentation. The hand-picked grapes were pressed and the juice chilled to 50 degrees before being transferred to French barrels for three weeks. After ML, the wine remained in oak for another 8 months. Made by Wölffer Estate's Roman Roth, the wine is hearty enough to stand up to fall's rich pork and chicken dishes. Available at Martha Clara for $17.99.

Bedell Cellars, known for its reds, has recently released two remarkable Chardonnays. The 2000 Chardonnay Reserve was, like the above wines, fermented in French oak and is buttery and rich. It is, not surprisingly, a white that red lovers can sink their teeth into, a style I often think of as white red wines ($16 at the winery). Bedell's other release, the 2000 Estate Chardonnay, is, by contrast, a fruity steel fermented sipper. It is crisp without being tart, makes a pleasant aperitif and is also an excellent buy at $10 at the winery.

Lieb Cellars newly released 2000 Reserve Chardonnay – in the winery's stylish signature bottle – is fruit-centered (making it a perfect compliment to those cream-laced sauces, especially if spiked with lemon) and well balanced. It was also 100 percent barrel fermented in French oak and flows softly over the palate with a surprisingly velvetly texture for a Chardonnay. Available at the winery for $15.

The wines above all pair well with seafood or poultry in cream sauces. And if you are planning a dinner party in the near future, try the scallops with leeks and Pernod (page 135 in Pierre Franey's The New York Times 60-Minute Gourmet – my culinary Bible for quick meals) served over a delicate pasta, such as angel hair, for an elegant and simple meal with any of the wines above.

So, is Chardonnay's popularity a thing of the past as some would have us believe? Hardly. At least for now. Next year, who knows? I once saw a piece of graffiti scribbled on a wall that read, "God is dead: Nietzsche," and underneath, in different handwriting, it said, "Nietzsche is dead: God." Now THERE'S a good example of credible last words… Cheers.

"Fairytales Can Come True, It Can Happen To You..."

By Roy Bradbrook.

Some kids dream of becoming a baseball player like Derek Jeter or a football star like Brett Favre. Some may dream of being the next Britney Spears or Madonna, while others want to be next Katy Couric or Matt Lauer. For the vast majority, these dreams will remain unfulfilled, but there are, fortunately, exceptions to the rule.

To listen to someone who has achieved his life-long dream, tune your radio to 1390 AM in the afternoon between 3 and 5 p.m. and you will hear Bruce Tria introducing a stream of melodic music from the golden era of singers such as Frank Sinatra, Ella Fitzgerald and Tony Bennett. Bruce, now the president of WRIV1390, the friendly local radio station that has been serving listeners from Wading River to Mattituck and Eastport to Hampton Bays, has achieved his dream.

Bruce blames it all on his mother because, as he told me, "We lived in Glendale (Queens) when I was growing up and she always had the radio on. The voices coming out of this strange box fascinated me from a very early age and this is something that has never left me. Today I feel so fortunate that I am living out my childhood fantasies."

WRIV1390 has been on the air since June 1955. The station started broadcasting from a studio in Riverhead (near today's Village Pizza) on Main Street. These premises burned down in 1956 in the second-worse fire ever experienced in that town. After a series of moves, the station is now located in one of Riverhead's fine old office buildings on Main Street.

Bruce on the air at WRIV

Bruce Tria started his professional career as a disc jockey on WLNG, an oldies/local news station, before joining WRIV. "WRIV had been very conservative in its approach and nothing really had changed for the last fifteen years. No progress was being made. I started making some changes, without really asking management and, to be fair, they were pretty good about it. I left in 1985 after the station had been sold again. Then in 1987, my father and I bought the station ourselves. We immediately changed the focus from adult contemporary music to standards. In those days there was a half-hour news broadcast at midday and at 11:55 a.m. Madonna was featured and at 12:30 p.m. we changed to Sinatra. The station's audience numbers had been going downhill and the fact that we did not get one complaint or comment about the change in programming really highlighted the indifference or lack of listeners! Incidentally, the concept of thirty-minute newscasts went out of style some ten years ago, reflecting the changes in the way people are prepared to listen to such programs today."

WRIV1390, as its listeners will already know, is very music-driven. Bruce explained that their key demographic range is 35 to 64 year olds, although he knows that there are very many listeners in the 65-plus category as well. The morning segments have more news, information and interviews and there is regular input from listeners.

When asked about the problems and opportunities in their operation, Bruce replied, "Our inherent strength is our size because of the way that we can focus on our local listener population and ensure that we listen to their needs. Conversely, our inherent weakness is also our size! We are a small radio station with all that that means in terms of cost containment and we are also an AM station in an increasingly FM world. Getting a FM license is very difficult because they are all taken but if one became available we would certainly want to explore the options."

Bruce Tria had a dream fueled in his formative years by such names from the past as William B. Williams of WNEW, Martin Block of WOR and Jack Paar of NBC. What he has accomplished shows that childhood dreams really can come true. And who knows if there may be a young person listening, entranced by the voices and music, thinking of his or her dreams for the future?

Here's what the locals have been saying about the new restaurant at Indian Island, known simply as "The Clubhouse"

- This is the best burger in town…
- I've never had oysters like this before, they're delicious…
- Your prices are so reasonable…
- We are so happy that you will be open year-round…
- We can have my father's retirement party here. I heard that the catering is excellent…
- The specials are terrific. I had a caesar wrap for lunch during the week and then I came back with my husband and the kids for Oyster Madness on Sunday…
- Dinner was delicious, We'll be back for breakfast…
- The Clubhouse has such a relaxing atmosphere. We love to look out at the river while enjoying a meal…
- Looks like this is the new best kept secret in town…

Color

to me, "but it works!"

I ask Bob about who his favorite photographers are. "Ansel Adams for his color work. I don't think that his color work was released until after his death. I went into a museum in Portland, Maine, where they had an Ansel Adams exhibit and asked if they had his color book. 'He didn't do color work,' they said. 'He certainly did!' I said."

Galen Rowell is another of Bob's favorites. A former photographer for National Geographic (not surprisingly), Rowell was featured in Oprah's magazine last year and has published many books. "He's very into the science of light and how people respond to things. When people see an image in one of his seminars that they really respond to, they make that gasp, that take-your-breath-away sound we all make. And when there's something not quite right with the image, they don't do it. He really gets into examining that basic instinct, that moment before the mind has a chance to analyze the image. Studies have actually shone that that sound is a universal reaction. That's really the bottom line, what I'm always looking and hoping for.

Bob also hopes to do a book someday of East End images. He has a lot of images now and is thinking about the next step. But the myth persists, in certain circles that, as far as photography is concerned, black and white is art and color is not.

"I was at a gallery with my work and the owner said that color photography isn't really fine art. I think we're doing the scene a disservice if we strip out all the color when the color is one of the things that make it so beautiful. This is especially true out here where the light and color are so magnificent."

And the moving, artistic images Bob McInnis captures are a perfect testament to that belief.

Bob's work is included in a new book, The Natural History of Long Island. Visit his website at www.eastendart.com or stop by Century 21 realty in Greenport on Front Street.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

What is it about retro and replica cars that seem to be capturing the public's fancy? What has me questioning this phenomena is that the latest entry to the retro world of automobiles, the Mini Cooper, seems to be selling quite well. In fact, according to a press release I recently received from the Mini public relations staff, the new mini company, ie: BMW, has sold more Minis in the first six months since their introduction than the combined sales in the US of the old Mini back in the '60s.

I have to admit that now that I've seen the new Mini in its natural environment, on the road, it's an absolutely charming little vehicle. In a world of mainly look alike eggshell cars, one's eye is drawn to it like an arrow. It certainly has maxi curb appeal.

But is it better than the original? In fact, is any retro car better than the original? All retro cars drive better and are better built than the car they mimic. As well they should be, since they are technologically much more advanced, and even factoring in inflation, compared to the originals, they cost much more.

Automotive history has always been important, and the original Mini is considered by many to be one of the most significant cars ever built. I agree. The original Mini, along with the Italian Fiat 500 and the French Deux Chevaux are perhaps the three most charming small automobiles ever produced. They were huge sales successes, and technically innovative.

Al three were priced as entry level "people's cars," but it was the Mini that went on to be famous as a miniature British hot rod. In modified Mini Cooper S form, this little bugger went on to win many international races all over the world. Most car collectors today opt for the modified versions of the Mini because they are much more fun to drive.

Is the new Mini better than the original? As a practical daily driver it certainly is. More fun than a '67 Cooper S? Certainly not. Short of a Lotus Super Seven, there is no car in the world that could put a smile on your face faster than a properly set up Cooper S hot rod.

Lotus Elan

The new Mini certainly pays homage to the original. In fact, I want one. Dark silver with a white roof, thank you. In Cooper S form, of course.

What about the original retro car, the vehicle that started all this craziness – the Mazda Miata? This Lotus Elan, MG-A, Austin Healy Alfa Spyder clone burst upon the scene in 1990 to a stunned auto enthusiast populace.

Because it was the first retro car, and because it was designed and built by Mazda, then a small and struggling B team Japanese automotive company, it had to be right. And indeed it was. It had the build quality (and still does) of some cars that cost twice as much. The Miata has a chassis that is much better than it has to be. To top it off, when first introduced, the car was a bargain, so popular that there were waiting lists of buyers.

Recently, an old friend to whom I hadn't spoken in years, called me from California. He had been an industrial designer, and had always owned British sports cars. Sounding embarrassed, he told me he had finally "given in" and bought a Miata. It was as though he thought himself a traitor to the world of real cars, cars with European pedigrees and fancy monikers that are hard to spell, much less pronounce.

Lack of pedigree is perhaps the only thing wrong with the Mazda Miata. It is very collectable and someday in the future will be a highly desirable collector car. Yes, it certainly doesn't have the charm of an MG-A or Healy 100, but in twenty five years it will, because it too will be from another time. It's entirely possible that someday, some manufacturer will make a look alike retro car of the present Miata. Even weirder, a future rendition of the current new Mini or retro T-Bird.

In the sci-fi thriller "Blade Runner," most of the cars on the streets of future Los Angeles were old looking '50s automobiles. Is director Ridley Scott's visual prediction becoming a reality?

Most of the new retro cars are impressive pieces of automobile design. It is history repeating itself in a good way, a combination of art and technology. Are the new cars better than the originals? Technically, obviously yes. Design wise? Arguable. Will the new cars stand the test of time like the original Mini? Let's talk about it in twenty-five years!

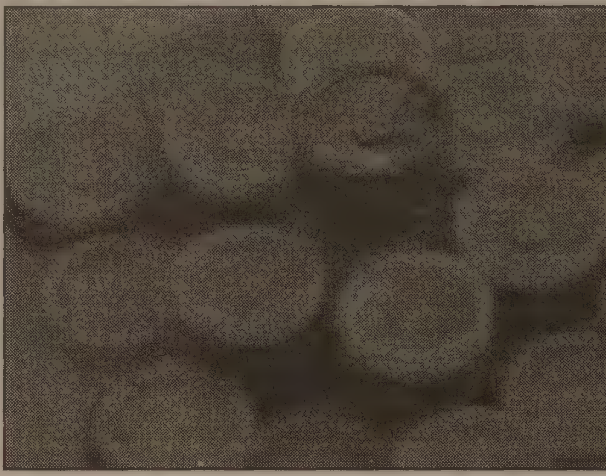
Checkers

It couldn't get any better. Fall has finally started to show its face and the air has a new crisp feeling. I love this time of year; there is baseball to follow, holidays to look forward to, and a sense of calm when compared to the non-stop action of summer. It is a great time of year to sit down in your favorite easy chair and relax.

I decided that it would be smart to head home from my internship in New York to relax a little bit and catch up with my brothers and sisters. I woke up on Saturday morning with the intention of spending time with my little sister Molly who is twelve years old. When I pulled up to my mom's house, Molly greeted me with bright eyes and a cheerful smile, opened the front door and ran out of the house full throttle. "DAAAAVVEEE!" she yelled while running towards me.

We said our "hellos" and "how's it goings" and then we were off to the beach. I decided that I wanted to go for a little jog along the shore and invited Molly. She was more than happy to run with me. I thought that this was going to be a great way to get a little brother-sister bonding going, and was having flashbacks of my oldest sister Maya who took me on one of the most hellish runs of my entire life when I was twelve. It may have been the longest twenty minutes of my entire life. Of course I made Molly run for thirty.

When we got back to the car, she was exhausted. I told her that she did a great job and that running would make her faster for basketball season. She picked up a seashell and threw it at my face. Okay, I thought. Maybe it is time to buy Molly some lunch. I looked at Molly and said, "Do you want anything to eat?"



She looked at me as if she was hallucinating, "Water," she squeaked.

We both hopped into my truck and I headed for the Sag General Store, which is right up the road from Sag Main where we were. When we got inside the store, we both grabbed two big bottles of water and sat down at a table, which is located right in the middle of the store. I noticed that the tabletop was a checkerboard, and there were a bunch of pieces scattered all along the table. This was quite possibly one of the coolest tables that I have seen in a while. The bottom part of the table where there would normally be legs was replaced with a giant wine barrel. The top of the table was simply a large piece of old wood that had a checkerboard painted into it. We had to play a game.

We set up the checker pieces and I made the first move. I have never been very good at strategy games like checkers or chess. But for some reason, I was kicking butt. We were both playing very seriously and I had found myself with four kings while she only had two. Granted Molly is only twelve, but she knew how to play this game, and she was not making any stupid moves, I was just outfoxing her.

Molly was down to one king and one regular piece and I had four kings. There was no way that I could lose. I decided that I should hone in on the one king before I started my attack on her regular piece.

At this point, there was a small crowd that had surrounded our table. Two little boys around the age of five were taunting Molly and telling her that the game was over. An older guy who I assumed was their father, also looked on curiously. He had a slight smile sneaking through his face. I felt that at this point I really had to win. I could not allow a twelve-year-old to beat me while three people were watching my every move.

Molly was still intent on the game and was highly focused. I was very impressed with her ability to fight and strategize even though most of her forces were depleted.

I decided to sacrifice one of my kings by moving next to hers. I calculated that she would jump my king with her king, this would put her king in jeopardy as my other remaining king would move in for the kill. The party was over for my little sister; I almost felt bad about it.

I made my tactical sacrifice and pushed my king within striking distance of hers. I awaited her next move. Just like I had predicted, she picked up her king and jumped the one that I had just moved, she then put it down right next to my other king which I had planned to use in order to destroy her remaining army. But suddenly, I saw that she had not finished her move with just one jump. She picked up her king again and killed another one of my kings. She had double jumped. Mmmmm, I thought.

Then, without warning, she moved her king again over my third king, and then again over my fourth and last king. She quadruple jumped! Was this legal? All of the boys that were sitting next to us started to cheer. The father walked away grinning and shaking his head. Molly looked up at me. I was in shock.

"You can't do that," I said.

"YES I CAN, YES I CAN!" she was jumping up and down in her seat.

I stood up infuriated. How could this have happened? I was winning; it was four kings to one king. Molly was hysterically laughing. I walked out of the store as a defeated checkers player. We both climbed into the car.

"I feel so good that I beat you, Dave."

"That's great Molly. Put on your seatbelt."

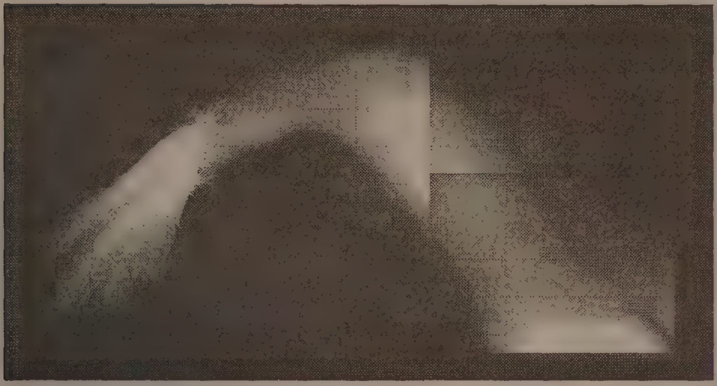
ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss



Faculty Exhibit At Southampton College

The Fine Arts faculty exhibit at Southampton College is always a pleasure to see; offering a perspective that differs from most gallery/museum shows. While the teachers are certainly professional artists, we tend to reserve judgément regarding their works' quality, per se.

Why? Because such exhibits are not about whether these instructors are better than their students, but about artistic intent. Are there varied approaches, styles and worldviews represented or is there a sameness that doesn't give students a broad perspective?

We're happy to report that diversity and vigor are alive and well at Southampton College. Consider the Photorealism of Deidre Brennan's picture, "Little Princess," with its woman/child figure evoking a feminist reading and Barbie Doll memories. Conversely, Paul Eastup's photograph, "Rancho de Scorpio," does not allow us to define a specific theme or time period, its imagery more universal in nature.

While Cheryl Dorskind's "Japanese Mist" is a painting, its marshland covered with fog does not define a particular place or time either. It's the cosmic mood that counts.

Shapes help define works by Neil Slaughter, Patty Kim and Robert Armetta, whether the configurations derive from the Pacific Northwest, water or onions caught in a still life pose, respectively. Such subjects are given a collective interest, running the gamut from Expressionism to Realism. Patrick Ireland continues stylistic variation in the geometric abstraction.

Almond Zigmund and Beth Giles and sculpture also represent Diverse and arresting mediums, including prints by Dan Richolt and Phyllis Kudder-Sullivan. We are particularly attracted to the myriad of materials used as well; especially Michael Rosch's metal, stone and wood.

Different formats are present, too, in the four separate paintings from Roy Nicholson's series, "The Gloaming Group," reminding us of his penchant for physical and philosophical divisions between two worlds.

The faculty show will be on view at Southampton College's Avram Gallery until October 18.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ERIC FISCHL

A quick glance at this year's poster for the Hamptons Internationals Film Festival reveals a couple engaged in some kind of lovemaking, but we're not sure what kind. Nor are we sure how this image relates to movies.

A closer look at the poster's artist would perhaps clear up the mystery. Unless you didn't know much about Eric Fischl, it's creator, except that he's a well-known international painter who, along with his wife, artist April Gornik, has a home in the Hamptons.

No matter that the viewers are confused regarding the poster's intention. While the image is arresting on its own terms, suffice it to say that the deceptively simple image is not simple at all. Nor is it meant to be about coupling or film.

Rather, the poster is yet another way, which Mr. Fischl is expressing, some salient, recurring themes and styles: his signature. By so doing, his work could have some connection with movies after all, the term "auteurism" applied to directors with a signature message and approach.

There's another important bond that Mr. Fischl's art shares with film: its narrative nature. Simply stated, his pieces tell a story, many of them sexually directed, but in a unique, special and identifiable way: Ironically, the spectator is not privy to the "plot," the figures "caught" in a frozen moment. (Like a film's shot) between an events beginning and end. Often, this "moment" signifies a rite-of-passage.

Thus, we don't know if the couple is about to have sex or whether they have just finished. Regardless, the image presents a fascinating and delicious dilemma for the viewer to ponder. Moreover, we notice that the man and woman are not looking at each other and that there's only a partial view of their bodies, representing two more signifying characteristics.

While Mr. Fischl's Neo-Expressionism is also a recurring trait (note the poster's contrast between darks and lights), the cover image conveys yet another significant quality: its postmodern sensibility. Thus, Mr. Fischl draws from the classical tradition of event-centered storytelling, often using subjects from the affluent class. (This affluency is not as apparent on the poster as in some of his other works.)

Take a third look at this week's cover poster. It's pure Fischl and pure art. –Marion Wolberg Weiss

Shop 'Til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

The Montauk daisies are popping up all over town and give me the signal that is really the start of the fall season. Halloween will be here soon and then Thanksgiving and so on and so on. Let's do some shopping!

Main Street Sweets in Westhampton Beach is starting its famous "Candy Super Sale" on Friday October 11th. Chocolates are selling for two pounds for $10 and non-chocolates are five pounds for $10. Get there early for the best selection...

If you love TJ Maxx for fashion, you will love Val's Closet on Main Street in Hampton Bays. Val is running a "Big Bag Bazaar Sale" for the Columbus Day weekend. You will find one of the largest selections of handbags priced as low as $10...Look for designer names like Fendi, Gucci, Burberry, Donna Karen ABS and much more. This is indeed the TJ Maxx of Hampton Bays. No kidding!

Do I have a scoop for you! A brand new shop, Christmas By The Bay located on Long Island Avenue in Sag Harbor is open and they are having their soft opening this Columbus Day weekend, October 11th. This unique shop will be stacked to the rafters with fabulous Christmas and holiday decorations including trees, lights, ornaments, personal ornaments, and specialty gift ware that includes wine glasses, dinner plates, snow globes, and much more. Wow! We can all start our Christmas shopping this weekend and what a great place to start. Call 917-270-6210 for information.

Strolling on Division Street in Sag Harbor I checked in with Lucy at Out Of The Closet to see what was happening for Halloween. Well, I found the coolest, fun, funky, sexy outfits for all the parties around town. Look for black leather hot pants, fishnet stockings, lots of (ooh la la) black lace, go-go boots (remember them?), leather chaps, flapper dresses, Mexican skirts, Hef smoking jackets, brocade tuxedo jackets, sexy cocktail dresses, wild seventies dresses and leisure suits just to name a few costume ideas. Stop in and leave with a bag full, no kidding.

Right across the street at Harbor Tubs there is a spa inventory liquidation sale until October 14. Now is the time to do your spa shopping for next season or any season.

Mark your calendars for the fiftheenth annual Hampton Day School Potato Festival on Mitchell Lane, on Sunday, October 13, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. A boutique on the site will feature T-shirts, sweatshirts, hats, plants and much more. Don't miss the fun!

At Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton look for a "Display Model Sale" that is happening right now. This store has great home furnishings, lamps and plenty of accent accessories. Let me tell you, this is not a shop to pass by, it is filled to the rafters with great deals.

Get those shopping bags ready because the Claire Murray store on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having their "Huge Columbus Day Sale" on October 10 through October 14. For five days only, you can save up to 50% off on all fall and holiday sweaters. The big news is that every 100% wool hand-hooked, heirloom quality rug in the store is 50% off. That's for me, hope they have one in lavendar or purple...What the heck, celebrate the season early with the unique holiday rugs or just redecorate, like I'm doing. Give a call for information at 287-3363.

On Main Street in Southampton at Corwin's Jewelers look for a "Blow Out Sale" on October 11th through October 14, Columbus Day weekend. Selected watches are up to 75% off, all colored stone jewelry will be up to 60% off, and estate merchandise and gold (rings, pendants, earrings) up to 50% off. Nice sale!

In East Hampton on Main Street at La Cafetiere there is an October sale on house accessories. This gala sale will include mostly French merchandise such as floor sample furniture at 40% off, bed and table linens at 20% off and dishes, glassware and vases at 10% off. This sale is for the entire month of October, so get going to get the best selections. Note that this shop is closed on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Time to run for my haircutting appointment at Blaise Haircutting Studio in Bridgehampton for the famous BlaiseCut...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

Honoring Long Island and the Hamptons as "Hollywood East" by presenting films produced here.

2 P.M. Saturday, October 12 – ROCKET GIBRALTER
Filmed entirely in Sagaponack, Burt Lancaster closes his career with his most sensitive performance as an ailing father entertaining his large family on his 77th birthday. This little known film celebrates life and family with heartfelt brilliance.

Saturday, October 19 – No Showing

2 P.M. Saturday, October 26 – DEATH TRAP
Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve star in a funny, scary, shocker. A cat and mouse game that's as playful as a razor sharp battle-axe. Featured are an East Hampton windmill and the cemetery.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 2 – ANNIE HALL
Classic Woody Allen. It won four Oscars including Best Picture. As hilarious and wittily snappish as the live lobsters loose in the Hampton Beach House.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 9 – THE DAIN CURSE
An early Dashiell Hammett novel jumps stealthily into Long Island mystery locations with all the sexy, smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon's author.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 16 – LAST SUMMER IN THE HAMPTONS
Three generations of a family of inflated egos and talent come to their East Hampton summer home for what will be the last time. For icon Viveca Lindfors, it was to be her last film.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 23 – MASQUERADE
A taunting, romantic suspense thriller of a young man's ambiguous ambitions and the wealthy wife he married for her dowry? It is a dark, who-dunnit plot lit up by beautiful people and, likewise beautiful Southampton and Sag Harbor.

Saturday, November 30 – No Showing

2 P.M. Saturday, December 7 – NETWORK
East Hampton's titanic denizens, Director Sidney Lumet and writer Paddy Chayefsky's dead-on "shot heard 'round the world" taken at television and unprincipled industry in general, presaged today's headlines. A way-over-the-top entertaining melodrama, it won Oscars' for Mr. Chayefsky, Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway and Beatrice Straight. This film gets you up off your seat shouting, "We aren't going to take it anymore!"

2 P.M. Saturday, December 14 – SABRINA
A bright holiday bauble. The lots of color added remake of the Audrey Hepburn/Bogart original, adds more gilt to the other L.I. Gold Coast, Glen Cove, where Scroogy, business only, Harrison Ford is made to appreciate the cheer in the world by his chauffeur's young daughter. It's a lush, very-merry movie.

Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Fall 2002

ROCKET GIIBRALTER

Being screened this Saturday, October 12, at 2 p.m. in Duke Hall at Southampton College as the season's premiere of Dan's Papers on-going FREE Film Festival of "Movies Made Here," is the memorable 1988 film, Rocket Gilbralter starring Burt Lancaster and Macauley Culkin. (An odd combination, you say? Wait 'til you see this heart breaker!) It was shot entirely on location in Sagaponack in Bridgehampton (another beautiful heartbreaker).

When it was first released it seemed to go unnoticed. This was probably because of its small, intimate nature in a time of big bruisers. And, as told to me by its producer, Michael Yulick (who will not be out here for the screening) the producing studio changed heads in the middle of the production and they gave publicity and promotion preference to the projects they initiated. A fine film got lost in the shuffle. But, thank goodness – and there is a lot of goodness in this film – one of Burt Lancaster's last performances is recorded in a golden and tender motion picture about a large family coming together to celebrate patriarch Lancaster's birthday at his comfortable summer and ocean soothed house.

Audiences will continually be drawn to Rocket Gilbralter. Though it makes no extremely dramatic moves, the naïve earnestness and dedication of eight children, to give their grandfather a gift they know he wants, carries a hefty weight right out of the movie and buoys it way above the highest waves at Sagg Main Beach. A fine screenplay by Amos Poe includes many genuine bits of character sorted carefully out of all our experiences, along with steady dialogue that conveys a family's seemingly routine visit to Grandpa to celebrate his 77th birthday. To say that it is a family picture is to skimp. It is a big family picture with daughters, sons, in-laws, and of course, those plucky kids.

Burt Lancaster is the grandfather. He was in the twilight of his burly, but sensitive career and reflecting those qualities, is perfect as a relaxed writer who knows that death is rocking his hammock and seems to be pleased to be joining his wife who passed on earlier. He enjoys listening to Billie Holiday's singing, and the quiet atmosphere of Sagaponack. He liked his gifts: a glorious Jackson Pollack art book, and Fred Astaire movie tapes, but, had only wished for the big one that the children took heed to.

Then there is Macauley Culkin in the prime of his career (all of 5 or 6 years old), lighting up every scene and instigating action with hardly 5 or 6 words. He works perfectly as a symbol of quiet strength, the innate goodness of heart that creates great emotion.

I cannot tell you much more about this film without spoiling the enjoyment of the process of growth from scene to scene that builds so nicely to its somewhat startling, but totally satisfying conclusion.

Daniel Petrie's direction is dreamy. He gives the film a refined smell and sense of atmosphere that is worked well by the cinematographer, Jost Vacano, with artful dabs, like the use of a gold filter, enhancing the upper third of the picture in key scenes. Some of the other fine actors are better known now than they were then: Kevin Spacey, Bill Pullman, Sinead Cusack, and in a funny bit part as the "French" caterer, David Hyde Pierce.

Beyond watching and being warmed by this film, you will be pondering it for a long time. I urge you to call for reservations at 537-0500 to assure your presence at this memorable presentation, which takes place at Southampton College's Duke Hall in the Chancellor's building off the main parking lot. Please be there before 2 p.m. for a talk, a wonderful film followed by refreshments and some tender schmoozing with me, your host, Guy de Fraumeni with Sarah Halsey.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals.

Moonlight Mile

Moonlight Mile, gingerly trudges back a few nostalgic miles and thirty discomforted years to a small Boston suburb where a very ordinary couple deals with the killing of their daughter by taking into their life the boy she was to marry. And, good grief! It is just that… good grief. Not suffering, gripping or acerbic grief. Instead, it is a toothsome, licorice-licking sweet, cozy kind of grief. This is its ambidextrous, double-dealing style. It straddles the many hurdles it has set up to overcome and this makes the mileage predictably mushy. With soapy sentimentality it muddles the 1970's youth movement, the US generation of love and togetherness, with the older ME generation of self-awareness, self-help and self-assertiveness. They are blended so smartly, you may find yourself nodding knowingly, as if in a 12 Step meeting and, blurting out, "Thank you for sharing with us!" Or, if like me, you go a bit bananas when you hear that phrase exploited again, you may say, "Phooey"! And Heaven forefend, we hear the word, closure, uttered again. I'd likely rap them in their cliché-stuffed mouth.

Moonlight Mile's, writer /director, Brad Silberling is in denial (Oops, there's another). He fends off criticism of his obviousness by having his characters rib them. He insists, "See, I'm cool." Well, he is and he isn't. F'rinstance, he has used the ravishing Rolling Stones' ballad "Moonlight Mile" (the film's title song) and many other terrific singles of the period to great advantage to add "Hip" to the prosaic, thin, tight-ass scenario. Since Vietnam is barely hinted at, we guess he used the 70's time frame for the music which, by contrast, makes his screenplay especially, fuzzy-moldy. Another clue: the story is loosely based on the 1989 death of his girlfriend.

Veteran actors, (scars only barely visible) Dustin Hoffman and Susan Sarandon are cloaked in middle class mufti that partially covers their be-meddled talents. They are the survivor parents. Hoffman is a fuss-budget, compulsive putterer. Not at golf… he's a Real Estate salesman. Here in Moonlight, he appears to revisit a past ambition. This is a sort of, "Death of a Salesman's Daughter." Ms. Sarandon gives a bitchy edge to the mother, but, as with the rest of the film, the sharpness is dulled by coddling. The writer/director must have had symbolic fun with their names. Dustin is Ben. How square. How reformed. (Not to worry, there's a Rabbi and, a Cantor). Susan is JoJo, the spunky wind-up toy poodle. See her snap at the sympathy callers. See Ben tidy up the kitchen. Their last name is Floss. How soft. How flaccid. How thready. They melt into your heart and get between your teeth..

Taking the accidental homicide of their daughter quite hard is Jake Gyllenhaal as the fellow she was to marry. He is Joe Nast, troubled, with bottled-up emotion. Ben and JoJo have taken him in as a son. Or, has he taken them in? He, in sight of everyone, has a sexy dance with a sweet Postal Worker/Bartender, played so well by Ellen Pompeo. Also adding some shine is Dabney Coleman, as another Real Estate broker. Gee, all the hundreds of Hampton Real Estate people must be plotting.

Oh, what about Joe? Jake's Joe essentially saves the movie, tempering the same old, same olds. Like: He has a big secret! What else? And, how can it end? Those 12 Step meetings can't be wasted.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Take Five 2002

with Jan Silver

Columbus Day weekend brings good theater, music and special events to the East End. Chicago's acclaimed Second City theater group performs in Southampton on Friday, Broadway star Joel Grey is at Bay Street Theatre on Saturday, and Portugal's popular fado singer Cristina Branco is at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday. For classical music lovers, tenor Gregory Perillo and pianist Victoria Ulanovaskaya present an evening of Italian arias and opera vignettes Saturday at Castello di Borghese in Cutchogue.

There is a big tent sale on Saturday and Sunday at Poxabogue Golf Center, Sagaponack, to benefit The Retreat. (Sign the petition urging the Southampton Town board to save Poxabogue!) Family events this weekend are fall festivals in Southampton and Montauk plus the Hampton Day School Potato Festival in Bridgehampton on Sunday.

Tickets for the Hamptons International Film Festival ($10-25) are now on sale at the box office, 66 Newtown Lane, East Hampton (631-287-0735). There are seminars, panel discussions and special presentations in addition to all the new independent features and documentaries. Information is also available online at www.hamptonsfilmfest.org. Venues for the programs are the East Hampton cinemas, Guild Hall, Sag Harbor movie theater, Southampton College and Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. (For a preview of Festival films and events, see separate article below.)

Joel Grey at Baystreet on Saturday

THEATER

Chicago's Second City theater troupe, whose alumni include Alan Arkin, Mike Nichols, Elaine May, Mike Myers and most of Saturday Night Live's original cast, will be at the Parrish Art Museum, Southampton, on Friday performing sketches, songs and improvisations. The evening starts at 6 p.m. with a cocktail reception followed by the performance (7 p.m.). Tickets are $60 ($40 for Parrish Business Council members); call (631) 283-2118 ext. 25 for reservations and information.

Broadway singer/dancer/actor Joel Grey will be at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre on Saturday to perform "The Road to Cabaret." This is billed as "an intimate evening of conversation, music and Q & A" with the audience. It is also a benefit for the theater and a reception follows the show. For tickets ($100), call Julie Fitzgerald at (631) 725-0818.

This is the last weekend to see Spindletop Productions' staging of Marc Camoletti's Don't Dress for Dinner at Guild Hall, East Hampton. This French farce is quite well done by the local professional troupe. Performances are Thursday through Saturday evenings and a Sunday matinee. Tickets are $18-20 (324-4050) and there's a dinner/theater package with The Farmhouse Restaurant (324-8585).

MUSIC

Young and beautiful Portuguese fado (soulful blues) singer Cristina Branco is at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday, 8 p.m. She will be accompanied by her husband Custodio Castelo on a 12-string guitar. Tickets are $25-40 at the box office (631) 288-1500.

Castello di Borghese/Hargrave Vineyard in Cutchogue presents the "Music of Italy" at 7 p.m. Saturday in the tasting room. Operatic tenor Gregory Perillo will sing selections from Italian operas and folk songs, accompanied by pianist Victoria Ulanovaskaya. Tickets are $30-$40 and include wine, cheeses and breads. For reservations, call (631) 734-5111.

Enjoy some old-time American folk and fiddle music with the Homegrown String Band on Sunday, 1 p.m., at the Quogue Library. This is a professional group and there is no charge for the program. Cider and cookies will be served.

FILM

Dan's Papers' "They Made the Movies Here" series begins its fall screenings with Rocket Gibraltar on Saturday, 2 p.m., in the Duke Lecture Hall at Southampton College. This is Burt Lancaster's final movie and it was filmed in Sagaponack. The program is hosted by Guy de Fraumeni and Sarah Halsey and there is no admission charge.

The new French film My Wife Is An Actress plays at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, Fri. and Sun; call 631-288-1500 for a schedule.

SPEAKERS

The annual Amy Awards, named in honor of Amy Rothholz and given to New York women poets under 30, will be presented on Saturday, 4 p.m., at Guild Hall, East Hampton. The winners will read from their work as will accomplished poet Myra Shapiro. There is no admission charge.

Adam Haslett, author of the current bestseller story collection You Are Not A Stranger Here will be at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday, October 12 at 5:30 p.m. New York Times' international correspondent Judith Miller will speak at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 6 p.m. to talk about biological warfare in the book she co-authored, Germs.

SPECIAL EVENTS

The Retreat, the local shelter for domestic abuse victims, has a benefit sale at the Poxabogue Golf Center, Montauk Highway, Sagaponack, on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. (While there, sign the petition urging the Southampton Town Board to keep Poxabogue open.)

The first "Taste of Southampton Harvest" is Saturday and Sunday in the village. Local shops, restaurants, the Historical Society Museum, Roger's Memorial Library and the Parrish Art Museum will host several of the events. The schedule is available at the Chamber of Commerce, 76 Main St. (283-0402 ext. 22).

Montauk has its fall festival Sat. and Sun., 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on the Village Green. The 15th annual Hampton Day School Potato Festival is Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. (raindate Monday) at the school grounds on Butter Lane, East Hampton. There will be games, crafts, food, face-painting, petting zoo and a Bungee run. Admission is $5 for adults; no charge for children 12 and under.

preview: the hamptons international film festival

It's hard to believe this is the Festival's tenth year. A quick review of the schedule from October 16 through 20 shows a slew of new feature and documentary films, a few screenings of past years' successes, new films made on Long Island plus panel discussions, seminars and special programs. These take place at the East Hampton cinemas, Guild Hall, Sag Harbor movie theater, Southampton College's Avram theater and the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Here are some highlights:

James Coburn will be honored with the first Golden Starfish Award for Career Achievement in Acting. His latest film, American Gun, will have its East Coast premiere here, and two of his favorite past films will be screened. Coburn will also mentor five "rising stars," talented young actors whose films are included in the Festival. He will have an open dialogue with them at East Hampton's Guild Hall, 4 p.m., on Saturday, October 19. Actor/producer/director Bob Balaban will moderate.

The opening-night film, Rabbit-Proof Fence (Australia, 2002), is the dramatic and true story of three young Aboriginal girls who escaped the Australian government's policy (1905-1971) of removing them from their families and training them to become domestic servants. The closing-night film Nowhere In Africa (NirgendwoIn Afrika) is having its U.S. premiere. A German film with English subtitles, it is the tale of a German Jewish family who escape from the Nazis to Kenya and must learn to cope with their uprooting and arrival in an unforgiving country.

The Festival is known for its Golden Starfish Awards to emerging feature and documentary filmmakers. The features selected for this year's competition are: Alma Mater (world premiere), Kiss the Bride (New York premiere), New Suit (East Coast premiere), Robot Stories (world premiere), and Searching for Paradise (New York premiere). The films in contention for the Golden Starfish Documentary award are Bang the Machine, Cinemania, Eat This New York, Hughes' Dream Harlem, and Shalom Y'All.

The Spotlight Films are new features from successful independent filmmakers. They will open at movie theaters over the next several months: American Gun (USA), Lawless Heart (USA), Love Liza (USA), Morvern Callar (UK), Ripley's Game (Italy/UK), Roger Dodger (USA), The Safety of Objects (USA) and Teknolust (USA).

Other categories for the films to be screened are: "Reeling Them In..." (seven acclaimed films from past HIFF years), Films of Conflict and Resolution (features and documentaries about past and current world conflicts), world (foreign) cinema, undergraduate and graduate films and videos, short films, family films, young videomakers (18 yrs. and younger), and Hip-Hop in the Hamptons.

Two unusual documentaries will have world premieres here. Off the Record is teen director/writer/producer/cinematographer/editor Jonah Green's diary about his father Mark Green's New York City 2001 mayoral race and its effect on his family. American Movie Classics (AMC) and The Women's Film Preservation Fund are presenting Bond Girls Are Forever, an in-depth look at how James Bond's paramours have evolved from passive sexual object to empowered equal. Actress Maryam D'Abo, Bond's love interest in The Living Daylights (1987), produced this film.

The New York Times' film critic Elvis Mitchell will interview this year's mystery guest in "A Conversation with..." on Friday, October 18, 4 p.m. at Guild Hall. Then actor/producer Alec Baldwin will turn the table and get to question Mitchell in "A Conversation with a Critic" in Guild Hall at noon, Sunday.

The Festival sponsors a Screenwriters Conference where six accomplished screenwriters mentor six emerging screenwriters. Several participants will speak at a writers' panel on Saturday, 11 a.m., at the Film Festival tent in East Hampton. The Golden Starfish Awards will be announced at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday at the East Hampton Cinema.

For Festival packages ($40-$1,000), individual film tickets ($10-25) or the Independents' Ball ($100), get a festival schedule and fax your requests to (631) 287-2639. Pick up a schedule and tickets at any of the Festival venues or the Festival office, 66 Newtown Lane (lobby), East Hampton. The schedule and ticket ordering is also available online at www.hamptonsfilmfest.org. Individual tickets are sometimes available at the screening site 10 minutes before a program is to start. The Film Festival office number is 631 287-0735. –Jan Silver

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

I recently taught a couple of cooking classes where the students made fresh pasta. The dough was easily made in a hand-cranked machine and taken to a point where it was still slightly thick to cut into spaghetti with the cutter attachment. Students were thrilled with the results. The spaghetti was cooked and served hot over a bed of peppery arugula and topped with a fresh cold tomato sauce. It worked because of the delicate quality of the pasta crowned with superb but fleeting summer tomatoes available at the moment. As delicious as the dish was I cautioned my students about fresh pasta versus dry. This doesn't mean that the dry commercial pasta we use more frequently should take second place to the fresh.

While different shapes of pasta will blend harmoniously with different sauces, an important consideration is not to overwhelm. A sauce with texture, such as meat sauce, works best with tubular pasta or shells that can "catch" the sauce. A delicate creamy sauce would not suit commercial grooved rigatoni, as the pasta would cancel out the sauce. On the other hand, a rich tomato sauce with sausage and a bit of spice added would compete with fresh homemade fettuccine or taglierini (wide or thin cut pasta) the texture of which is too delicate to stand up to the strong sauce. Italian cooks, for instance, would never prepare spaghetti alla carbonara, a rich sauce traditionally made with cream, eggs and bacon with fresh pasta, and only sturdy dry commercial pasta would be used.

Here are some typical dishes suitable to using good quality dry commercial pastas.

SPAGHETTI ALLA CARBONARA

Spaghetti alla Carbonara is traditionally made with dried pasta, which is strong enough to stand up to the rich sauce of pancetta (Italian cured bacon), butter, cream and eggs. To update the dish I substituted broth for the cream and found the dish equally appealing.

Serves 4-6

6 ounces pancetta, sliced about 1/2-inch thick
1 small dry hot pepper, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons unsalted butter at room temperature
3 whole eggs
1/2 cup chicken broth
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 pound dry imported commercial spaghetti
2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2-3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Cut pancetta into small dice and saute in a large non-stick skillet until crisp, about 6-8 minutes, stirring occasionally. Drain off the fat and stir in dried pepper.

2. Meanwhile In a mixing bowl, cream butter until soft and fluffy. In a separate bowl beat eggs with broth and grated cheese and stir into the butter. Keep in a warm place, near stovetop or in a water bath.

3. For the pasta, bring 4-5quarts water to a rolling boil and add salt. Put spaghetti in all at once, stirring to separate the strands. Cover to return immediately to a boil, then boil uncovered about 8 minutes or until pasta is al dente or firm to the bite. Ladle out a couple of tablespoons of pasta water and add to the pancetta and stir to deglaze over low heat.

4. Drain the pasta and add to the skillet with the pancetta then stir in the egg and broth mixture. Toss pasta well with the ingredients and taste for salt and pepper. Serve immediately in warm pasta bowls and drizzle a little olive oil over each serving.

DITALINI WITH CHICK PEAS

Ditalini, small tube-shaped pasta, is typically used for this simple recipe of southern Italian roots.

Serves 4 as first course or side dish.

For the sauce
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 medium red onion, minced
1 can (1 lb. 3 oz.) chick peas with liquid
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

For the pasta
3/4 pound Ditalini pasta
1-2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water
1/3 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Warm olive oil in a saucepan and, stirring with a wooden spoon, saute garlic and onions about 1- 2 minutes until tender.

2. Add chickpeas with their liquid and simmer about 15 to 20 minutes, with cover ajar. Add tomato sauce and bring to a boil. Season to taste with salt and pepper and one or two tablespoons Parmesan. Reserve remaining Parmesan to serve at table.

3. Meanwhile, bring a large pot of water to the oil and add salt. Put in the pasta, cover to bring back to the boil. Uncover and cook at a rolling boil about 8 minutes until pasta is al dente or firm to the bite. Save a couple of tablespoons of pasta water if needed. Drain and mix with chicken pea sauce adding the reserved pasta water if sauce is too thick. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Serve at once with extra cheese, if desired.

FUSILLI WITH FENNEL, SAUSAGE AND BROCCOLI RABE

The ingredients for this pasta are felicitously paired. Fusilli and cavatappi are squiggly shaped pastas, appropriate to the sauce below.

Serves 4 -6

2 bunches broccoli rabe
1 small bulb fennel
1 pound Italian sweet sausage
2 tablespoons olive oil
5 cloves garlic, slivered
1/8 - 1/4 snipped dried hot pepper
1 cup chicken stock or broth
1 pound fusilli or cavatappi pasta
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/3 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Trim broccoli rabe, discarding the heavy stems. Separate the leaves and flowerets. Put in a bowl of cold water to soak for 10-15 minutes. Trim fennel bulbs of their feathery branches and discard these along with wilted or bruised parts. Cut the bulb into vertical slices about 1/4 inch thick. Place in a bowl of cold water to soak for 10-15 minutes. Drain broccoli rabe and fennel and dry separately in a clean kitchen towel.

2. Remove casing from sausage and saute in a large skillet breaking up them up into bite-sized pieces. Cook until sausage loses its raw color about 3-4 minutes. Transfer to a side dish and drain off any fat from the pan.

3. Warm 1 tablespoon olive oil in the same skillet the sausage cooked in and saute the fennel until lightly golden, about 5-7 minutes. Add garlic slivers and hot pepper and saute until garlic is pale golden, about 1 minute. Add sausage and broccoli rabe and stir to mix. Pour in chicken stock, bring to a boil and simmer 5-6 minutes, until broccoli rabe is tender, about 3-4 minutes. Season lightly with salt and pepper to taste. Can be prepared up to an hour ahead.

4. Meanwhile bring a large pot of water to a rolling boil and add salt. Put in the pasta all at once. Cover to return immediately to the boil then boil uncovered about 8 minutes until al dente or firm to the bite.

5. Drain pasta and add to the contents in the skillet. Toss to mix thoroughly. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and serve at once on warm plates. Drizzle a bit of remaining oil over each serving and pass extra grated cheese at table, if desired

Paradise Cafe

126 Main St, Sag Harbor
631-725-6080

They're making news at the Paradise Café. Not just in Sag Harbor - a town known for its fisherman ties and literary vibe, the chatter about the Paradise is spreading and the story is all about Robert Durkin, a hotshot chef who has served the East End for years and is now taking this local landmark to new culinary heights.

A look down Main Street in Sag Harbor starts to tell a very different story. Now in quiet autumn, the classic Sag Harbor movie theater, is next to Phao Thai restaurant, next to Grenning Gallery which sits adjacent to In Home an upscale home store - the town looks quite different then it did just a few years ago. New places are sprouting up at a dizzying pace to answer the demand to mix the new and the old on Main Street. And the Paradise has also undergone a lot changes in a really short time. The menu is now filled with upscale bistro fare with Italian influences, stocked with simple dishes that shine because of the quality of the preparation. Robert Durkin is the man behind this transformation.

Since he took over as executive chef this summer, he has revamped the menu, added new wines and taken a real interest in the bookstore up front. And just last week Robert took over ownership of the restaurant from Hal Zwick.

Our whole experience at the Paradise had Robert' s signatures written all over it. The Paradise can expect to have a whole new group of loyal followers due to this fact. There are people who follow him wherever he cooks. From start to finish his caring touch serves as the garnish to each dish.

We began with a glass of the Drylands Pinot Gris. A nice breadbasket filled with flatbread and sourdough baguette came to the table. It was a quiet night in town because it was pouring a cold September rain outside, and being inside amongst the books and the candlelight felt fantastic. Some of the familiar art deco touches of the old Paradise Diner have been preserved. We sat and checked out the menu in the familiar setting (brunch at the Paradise is my favorite in town) and were really excited by what we found.

I am a fan of simple dining and that's why I like Robert's style so much. Appetizers like a big bowl of mussels with tomatoes and tarragon, proscuitto di Parma with mission figs and shaved ricotta salada start the menu off with style. And after selling recommendations from both our waitress and the hostess we settled upon the hot pepper shrimp. This was a fantastic, spicy dish of shrimp in their shells, finished with a sauce that urged to be sopped up by torn pieces of baguette from the basket. This was a great appetizer to share and it was perfectly complimented by our glasses of New Zealand Pinot. Other must-order appetizers are the sautéed wild mushrooms on bitter greens and the simple but delicate local organic green salad with a grain mustard-herb vinaigrette.

If you know Robert and you have frequented any of his past ventures, Roberts in Water Mill in particular, you know that he cooks up one of the best chickens in town. The herb-crusted chicken is Robert's signature, served with a nice pile of shoestring potatoes like you would find in a great French brasserie. The penne with veal, sage and parmesan was a light balance of the flavors. This is also one of those dishes that people leave the Paradise talking about.

The new fall menu has a center cut pork chop, a Tuscan style pot roast and the classic Paradise burger with gorgonzola, bacon, lettuce, tomatoes and thick cut French fries. Their super-fresh selection of fish is a perfect complement to the heavier meat dishes. Jumbo sea scallops with grilled and roasted local vegetables, roasted halibut on local sweet corn with fresh tomatoes and French beans and a grilled salmon atop spinach risotto, beautifully presented with the warm combination of colors, round out the entrees.

For dessert we sampled a delicious Meyer lemon tart with a chocolate graham cracker crust. They also offer the classic crème brulee standby, a chocolate obsession cake and a pineapple tarte tartin.

The staff at the Paradise seems excited about the changes and the new season. As we walked out – full, happy and a bit sleepy – I was looking forward to curling up in bed with a book, and we stopped to check out the new selection of fall's hottest books.

Paradise's recommendations for must-reads this fall:

Fiction: The Piano Tuner, Daniel Mason; Blood of Victory, by local writer Alan Furst; Blessing, Anna Quindlen; Nonfiction: Longitudes and Attitudes, Thomas Freidman; Out of the Blue, Richard Bernstein.

Paradise is open for lunch, brunch and dinner 7 days a week. The café menu is served all day in the front dining room and at the bar. The new fall menu at the Paradise begins on October 15. Call 631-725-6080.

Please Pass The Pumpkin

Those blazing orange harbingers of autumn are all over the Hamptons, in all shades, shapes and sizes. Who can resist buying a whole bushel of them? They're pretty to look at, but even better to eat! Pick up all kinds of tips for picking out the best pumpkins and turning them into irresistible dishes from appetizers and snacks to main dishes and side dishes — and, of course, desserts of all kinds. Put on a cozy sweater and let's go pick some pumpkins!

Pumpkin Pointers

Pumpkins, pumpkins everywhere! We'll help you pick the best ones for cooking and tell you what to do with them once you get them home.

Don't Eat Jack!

Field pumpkins — the kind sold for carving Jack o' lanterns — are bland and watery compared to the sweeping array of other pumpkins and winter squash varieties sold specifically for eating. For baking and cooking, choose from sugar pumpkins or cheese pumpkins, or other winter squash such as butternut, acorn, delicata, Hubbard, kabocha or dumpling — all are similar in texture and flavor and can be used interchangeably in recipes.

Puree Your Pumpkins!

So how do you turn a thick-shelled squash into a pile of puree ready for pies, cakes, cheesecakes, cookies, ice cream, soups and sauces? It does take a bit of time, but it's super simple! Cut the pumpkin in half or quarters and scoop out the guts and seeds. Now you can either bake it at 375 degrees F (190 degrees C) for about an hour or microwave it on high for about 7 minutes per pound, until the pumpkin flesh is soft. Let it cool enough to handle it, then scoop the flesh out of the shell. Puree it in the food processor or push it through a sieve and it's recipe-ready!

Save those Seeds!

Picking through those pumpkin guts is worth it in the end for a big bowlful of toasted seeds for snacking. First rinse the seeds in a colander and blot them dry with paper towels. Toss them on a baking sheet with a drizzle of oil and the spices of your choice. Try chili powder, ranch dressing mix, lemon pepper, curry powder, Cajun seasoning, cinnamon and sugar, or just plain salt. Roast them in the oven at 350 degrees F (175 degrees C), stirring occasionally, for about 30 minutes or until golden brown and crispy.

By Aji Jones

Tierra Mar in Westhampton will be catering various events for the Hamptons Film Festival at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. There is a special package available to moviegoers that features various opportunities to sample Chef Todd Jacobs cuisine.

Nick & Toni's in East Hampton has announced the return of their Film & Food special. On Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, diners can enjoy a two-course prix fixe and a movie ticket for $22.

On Wednesday nights, Pacific East now offers a new Dim Sum menu in addition to their regular menu. A Cantonese specialty, Dim Sum is the collective name for a variety of small, mouth-watering dishes such as steamed or fried dumplings with meat or seafood filling, steamed buns, and shrimp balls. The menu features items such as a Vietnamese beef wonton, Siracha sauce, steamed Chinese pork bun, Shanghai style dumplings, sweet corn & chicken wonton, sweet chile sauce, tempura fried squash blossom, Lobster & shiitake Peking pancake, Thai crab wonton, sesame salmon dumplings, shrimp toast "Hong Kong style," stir fried squid and Peking duck roll.

Turtle Crossing in East Hampton will hold a special fundraising dinner on Sunday, October 13th from 6:30 – 8:30 p.m. to benefit The East Hampton Community Council. Turtle Crossing owner Stanley Singer will create a special three-course menu for the evening, with an emphasis on autumn comfort food. The cost is $50 per person, beverage included (gratuity, tax and alcohol not included). Seating will be by reservation only.

Mary Jane's in East Hampton is now open for lunch daily beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The Maidstone Arms in East Hampton is running a three-course dinner along with a movie ticket for $35 from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. daily.

East Hampton chef Simon Sheridan has created a number of special lunch and dinner menus for film buffs and "foodies" in town to attend the Hamptons International Film Festival. His meals can be custom designed and delivered with or without china, flowers, appropriate wines and servers. For more information call 631 827-6000.

Savanna's in Southampton offers a lobster special on Thursday nights - $22.95 for a 1 1/2 lb. lobster.

Indian Cove in Hampton Bays serves a prime rib and grilled shrimp special on Fridays for $18.75.

Ocean's Grillfish & Steak in Amagansett has a three-course prix fixe for $19.95 all night Sunday through Friday.

If you love pasta specials, Giordano's on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor has a deal for a meal at $14.95 Special Pasta Nights, Wednesday through Frday. Choice of pasta, salad and coffee with dessert. Enjoy your meal while you listen to the music of crooner Tony Della on Thurs. and Fri. evenings. For infomation call 631 725-4444.

New at the former space of ANoche is Mardi Gras – a New Orleans style roadhouse that claims responsibility for bringing "Creole madness" to Southampton. A clear indication the fun menu descriptions put together by chef Phil Eareckson. The blackened chicken fingers have been "personally blessed by the village voodoo queen," while Gator Joe's stuffed roasted red peppers are "used to cure whatever ails you." Daddy Jim's Cajun shrimp scampi will tame the gators into doing ballet in the bathtub! Mardi Gras is open 7 days a week from 4 p.m. until closing.

If you love "The Sopranos" but don't have HBO, head down to Rubi Red Restaurant on Sunday nights where you can eat at the bar while you're watching the show. Order from the $23 prix fixe menu or Rubi Red's regular menu featuring Mediterranean cuisine. If you'd rather watch the show from the comfort of your own home – Rubi Red also offers take out.

Breast Cancer Awarness: The East End Helps Out

Perhaps the spirit of giving has touched the East End far earlier than the holiday season this year, because as October marks the 17th annual Breast Cancer Awareness month, our community has rushed to step up to the plate. There are numerous ways the East End is recognizing the danger and gravity of breast cancer, and there are many arenas in which to get involved.

"We don't want anyone to think they are alone," says Susan Barry Roden, Community Outreach Organizer for the South Fork Breast Health Coalition. (There is also a North Fork Breast Coalition). Susan is a part of the team heading this Wednesday's biannual event for breast cancer survivors held at the Sienna Spirituality Center in Water Mill. This all-day workshop, entitled the Day of Renewal and Hope, is designed to ensure that "women's mental, emotional and spiritual scars don't rule the rest of their lives," says Susan. Fifty-five women will be participating in the Day of Hope, ranging in age from 27-78. They will listen to panel discussions led by Southampton Hospital's leading professionals on breast cancer, and follow with various "break-out sessions" – smaller group activities ranging from stress management, art therapy, and yoga to promote their well-being.

And Susan knows what it takes to make women feel good about themselves while battling the disease – she's a survivor herself. She's partnered with the American Cancer Society to become a Reach for Recovery volunteer, so she can share her compassion with other women challenged by breast cancer. She says that it is a huge relief for women to talk with someone who has had similar experiences – and she happily provides tips and tidbits of inspiration in order to help others weather the hard times (i.e. drink Sleepytime tea when you can't sleep at night.)

Scott J. Salon and Spa in Bridgehampton has generously offered to send skin care specialists to the Day of Renewal and Hope to discuss the delicacies of skin care while under radiation treatments. Funding for the Day comes from various community efforts, including Ellen's Well, a foundation that has grown out of Ellen's Run (a 5K run/walk held in August) and the Ellen P. Hermanson foundation.

The 3rd annual Shelter Island Run, held on Saturday, October 19, at 10 a.m., also aids in raising money. The run supports both the North and South Fork Breast Health Coalitions and last year 500 participants joined in with their family and friends. The barbecue that follows the race, sponsored by George's IGA, is a way to entertain the whole family.

The South Fork Breast Health Coalition also sponsors a program entitled Neighbors Helping Neighbors – providing everything from transportation to radiation treatments, money for anything eye glasses to babysitters, and camaraderie – all for women who are enduring the trials of breast cancer. For more information on how to get involved or donate, call 631-726-8606.

If you find yourself either in Manhattan or near the Jones Beach area on Sunday, October 20, you could have the opportunity to participate in Making Strides – a non-competitive 5-mile walk held by the American Cancer Society. With 70 participating locations around the country, Making Strides raises awareness through the sheer bigness of the event – and awareness is a major goal. Last year, over 325,000 people participated and roughly $26 million was raised. Sign-up for this event is available on ACS's web site at: www.cancer.org/makingstrides.

A broad goal of Breast Cancer Awareness Month is to boost public knowledge of the dangers of the disease. This year alone, approximately 182,800 women in the US will be diagnosed with invasive breast cancer and approximately 40,800 women will die from the disease. Only five to 10 percent of all breast cancers are inherited.

Even with these astounding statistics, some women still do not get routine mammograms – which can save lives through early detection of malignancies on the breast. Health professionals urge yearly mammograms for all women, and frequent self-examinations. However, as Susan M. Love wrote in the Op-Ed section of this week's New York Times, these methods of detection are effective – but certainly not perfect. In terms of women examining their own breasts, not all cancer tumors can be felt when they are smaller in size. Love advocates directing money and research towards innovative techniques using catheters and scopes to examine the milk ducts of the breast – the exact place where cancer begins.

New Cosmetic Laser Surgery Procedures
IN SOUTHAMPTON

Wondering who offers the latest in cosmetic surgery? Dr. Alexander Covey, Surgical and Medical Director of East End Laser Care in Southampton, has been sought out by local and summer residents, top models, and celebrities.

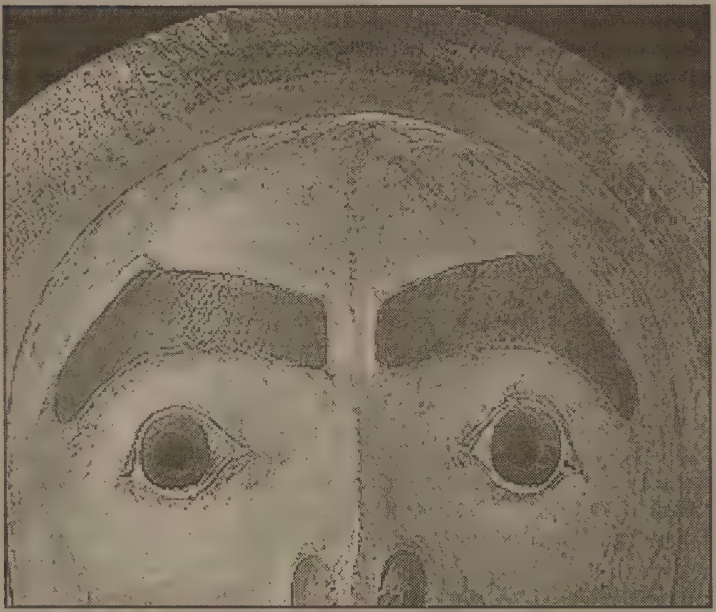
On November 6th at 7:00 p.m. Dr. Covey will present a seminar on The Newest Treatments In Cosmetic Laser Surgery at The Parrish Memorial Hall, located on the corner of Herricks Road and Lewis Street at Southampton Hospital. Topics will include non-invasive cosmetic laser surgical treatments such as: "Current Laser Techniques For Laser Wrinkle Reduction," "Laser Hair Removal," "The Latest Cosmetic Procedures To Eliminate Unwanted Blemishes, Facial Veins, Rosacea, Large Pores, Acne Scars and Uneven Facial Tone," and "How Botox and Collagen Reduce Wrinkles."

Join Dr. Covey and his staff to find out how Cosmetic Laser Surgery can help you look and feel younger. Meet patients who have had remarkable results and find out how cosmetic laser surgery can help you.

All attendees will receive special offers and there will be a drawing for a $500 Botox treatment. Pre-registration is necessary. Call 631-287-6662 to register for this exciting seminar because space is limited.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face... with Annette



Eyebrows

We spend endless hours buying make up for our face and eyes but we often ignore the vital part of the face, which enhances our overall appearance – the eyebrows. The eyebrows give character and balance to the face and often a pair of unkempt eyebrows may spoil a very attractive one. It is essential to spare a few minutes each day to ensure that your eyebrows are well shaped and in harmony with the rest of your face. And all it takes is a few minutes.

The previous trend of thin line or shaped in the form of natural arch eyebrows are no longer in style, no matter what you see. Today the emphasis is on the natural look. Magazines today suggest that slightly full, well-shaped brows with less tapered ends replace the earlier style of thin ends. Thus it is important that when you shape your eyebrows just remove the extra growth underneath the arch and between the brows. Also if you have naturally full brows you can get them thinned gradually. This will make sure that you do not end up with an unnatural look. It they are too thick, you can try tweezing in between them. Have one of those little tiny brushes or combs and keep working them in the opposite direction first and comb towards its natural shape. By doing this constantly you won't remove too much in one area giving them a sparse look. Then you'll just have to get brow powder and fill them in. Also, if they are long comb them down – that's right – straight down towards your eye and starting at the end of your brow with a small pointy scissors, cut in the direction towards your nose. This will eliminate those long hairs from messing up the perfect brow you have just tweezed or threaded.

If you aren't familiar with threading, you should be. I think it's one of the fastest ways to get the brows done. Threading is an art and cannot be done by everyone. The advantage of threading is that it is less tedious compared to plucking. When threading for the first time, just remove the extra stragglers. This will give a clean and neat look. Then, gradually after a period of time, have the shape changed. A drastic change in the shape may give an unnatural look to the face. If you are in the hands of a really skilled person, they can thin between the brows using this method.

Tweezing: This is the other alternative to threading and this is a much easier method. However, this is a rather tiring task and may often take up more time and energy. Tweezing is usually the easiest done after a shower when the pores are open and the hair is soft. It requires, an antiseptic solution, a pair of tweezers and cotton ball. If possible, edge on up to a window or somewhere where the light is excellent. This is important because even one stray hair can throw off the entire shape of the brow. Dip cottonball in an antiseptic solution and apply on the area between the brows and underneath the arch. Use one hand to stretch the skin slightly. First pluck all the stray hair on the bridge of the nose. Then work slowly and carefully towards the hair beneath the arch. Pluck the hair in the direction of the hair growth. Be careful that you don't pull the skin and damage it.

Waxing: This is another way of removing extra hair under the brow. This should be done carefully or else it may have disastrous results. However, threading and tweezing are better methods as they give a better shape to the brows as compared to waxing. I find waxing good for the first time tweezer who is squeamish anyway, no matter how you take it off. It removes large sections of hair which is common on the first timers. Once you scare the heck of them or yourself with that, you can go on to tweeze what the waxing has missed.

So these are some tips that you may keep in find the next time you want to try a different method of hair removal. Tweezing isn't the only method, though it's the best for daily maintenance. Try the threading, I am sure you'll love the results. Write me and let me know your experience! I would love to hear from you.

Friends Of The Long Pond Greenbelt

The Long Pond Greenbelt stretches all the way from Otter Pond in Sag Harbor to Sagg Pond in Sagaponack. There are actually thirty or so ponds in the Greenbelt area. However, only thirteen of them are currently under governmental conservation as the Long Pond Greenbelt system, including Round Pond, Little Round Pond, Long Pond, Little Long Pond and Crooked Pond, generally considered the five most beautiful ponds in the Greenbelt.

On Saturday, Friends of the Long Pond Greenbelt (FLPGB), an organization created to help conserve the Greenbelt, hosted a celebration at the end of Round Pond Lane in Sag Harbor, in order to raise awareness of conservation and preservation of the land, and maybe raise a little money, too. The organization is actually a compilation of many other environmental organizations, like the Southampton Trails Preservation Society, the South Fork Natural History Society, the Nature Conservancy, Suffolk County Parks and Recreation and others.

There is an old trail that connects all of the ponds in the Greenbelt. The FLPGB hosted a hike as part of the celebration, guide and all, where I joined a group of people who went on the hike. It went up the old Long Island Railroad train tracks. The trail is a relic of the days when the LIRR came out to Sag Harbor, a spur added because of the old icehouse planted just off Round Pond Lane, at the base of Round Pond. The icehouse supplied much of Long Island and New York City with ice at that time, before refrigerators became popular and replaced iceboxes in the home.

"Before World War II," said Tony Garro, the hiker-guide for the tour and a history expert for the area, "the railroad tracks were torn up and the metal was used towards the war effort."

At the foot of Round Pond, where the icehouse once stood, the water reflected the bright yellow, red and green of the trees and sun, reminding us of the changing season, despite the abnormally high eighty-degree temperature. And the sound of the water was almost hypnotizing, coming up quietly through the wetland, running between the grass and mud, the frogs jumping freely in the muck, making splashing sounds as they moved.

"The red trees are Tupelos or Sweet Gums," Bruce Horwith tells the group, a representative from the Nature Conservancy, and partner-guide for the hike. "They are wetland indicators." The Tupelo, he explains, is used by the municipalities to make decisions about building regarding construction permits.

The entire Greenbelt system was created by the glaciers, as was the rest of the North and South Forks. But the Greenbelt is a "near glacial relic," says Garro, "with only one other place in the world still as close to the same as when the glacier melted – Siberia." It hosts the highest concentration of rare plants and animals, according to the FLPGB, with at least 30 rare plants and wildlife in the system, all extremely vulnerable to extinction. It was officially preserved under "high priority status" in 1985, with now more than 500 acres under preservation.

There used to be streams that flowed between the rivers, but those have since dried up for the most part. Now the ponds are fed by springs from the aquifers, with cuts to help the ponds keep the constant flow of water, because the tidal movement is a major part of the Greenbelt ecosystem.

Nowhere was the retreat of water so noticeable as at Long Pond. We started at Round Pond, headed up to Ligonee Brook, which was now completely dry, but, according to Garro, used to supply Sag Harbor with water from Long Pond when it was a "surging metropolis." Then we went on to Long Pond and Little Long Pond.

"This is the lowest water level I ever remember seeing Long Pond at," said both Garro and Horwith.

At the foot of where the Pond used to start, is a small incline, after which it drops down slightly into what used to be the beginning of the wetlands. Now, however, it is just brush. The actual wetlands do not start for another 40 to 50 yards. There, in the middle of the wetlands; a large duck sits like a statue in a postcard, as if to stress Garro and Horwith's point. The dryness goes all around the pond, though not as emphatically as the top of Spring Tree Path. Here, the effects of global warming are frighteningly obvious.

The hike went on for close to two-and-half hours. We went up and down the constant undulations in the road, which legend says, according to Garro, were put in by the town to prevent drag races. However, we did not get to hike too far, despite the large amount time, because of the constant stopping and looking and watching and listening.

It is easy to take for granted this picture, which those of us living out on the East End, can see everyday. But the Long Pond Greenbelt is more than just an exceptional view; it is a place one can spend hours just hiking and learning, both about the environment and about history. And it is open to the public free of charge. There are few national environmental treasures that can claim that.

Friends of the Long Pond Greenbelt celebrate the preservation of the land every year. Other organizations involved in the celebration and preservation are: Sag Harbor Library, Group for the South Fork, Town of Southampton Waste Management, Southampton Town Environment Division. If you are interested in learning more about the Long Pond Greenbelt, or about getting involved in the preservation of the Greenbelt, call 631-537-0660.

Read Your Bills Before You Pay Them

Every month when the bills come in, most people just sit down at their desk and write out a check for the total amount on the bottom of the bill. I recently had a propane gas tank delivery and the bill was left on my doorknob on my front door. Normally, I would just put it in the pile and write all my checks out at the same time. This time for some reason, I handed the bill to my boyfriend John and asked him to look at it, I was curious about the price of propane gas, and maybe he was getting a better deal.

Not only was he getting his propane cheaper but also there was two charged on my bill that neither of us understood. One was a propane tank charge: $16 and the other was and environmental charge of $4.95. What the heck was that? I called the Propane Company, which is located in Westhampton Beach and questioned both charges. I was quickly told to ignore the tank charge, it was something that they added to the bill at the request of the company where they get their propane and the environmental charge was a mandatory charged by the government. Also it was a charge that they just added to the bill that month. Yeah right? I wonder how many of us have been paying that tank charge and never realized it. Needless to say, I am looking for a new propane gas company and goodbye to this one in Westhampton Beach after fifteen years.

Police Blotter

Many dirt bags commit thefts in the hopes that their bounty will help live in a better state. The dirt bag that stole a brass shower head from the outdoor shower of an East Hampton resident's Underwood Lane home may find him or herself feeling a little less dirty. The decorative, yet very functional, nozzle is valued at $200.

Another theft in East Hampton left a woman high and dry last Monday. She told police that sometime between Sunday night and Monday evening, someone stole her 6'2" Al Merrick surfboard along with its blue leash. The package was worth $540. Police told her to notify local surf shops of the board-snaking.

A fight at Southampton High School between two students warranted police presence last Thursday. After one of the 17-year-olds was arrested, he kicked out the window of the patrol car he was put in. It apparently made for an interesting ride to the Police Department. He was charged with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and criminal mischief in the fourth degree.

Another reckless youth found herself behind bars last week. Police in Bridgehamtpon said they saw the 20-year-old Southampton woman throw a beer bottle from her moving car. The bottle landed on the back of a nearby parked car and shattered the vehicle's rear window. She was charged with criminal mischief in the fourth degree.

This next guy apparently gets a little "crazy" when he feels a headache coming on. Police arrested a 44-year-old Sagaponack resident after Kmart security officers said they saw him steal a bottle of Tylenol, a pair of jeans, gloves, a ski mask and a couple packages of Stickety Doo-Da stickers. The $50 heist granted him a charge of misdemeanor petite larceny.

Some more decorative, yet useful, brass hardware was stolen from an east end home owner; this time on Grant Boulevard in Hampton Bays. The home owner told police that while his home was being renovated between June 2 and September 15, a $3,000 brass chandelier was taken from his basement. The thief didn't hang around to leave any evidence.

* * *

"They're always after me lucky charms!" he told police. Well, not exactly, but the 55-year-old Aberdeen, Scotland native who had been on a golf vacation last week complained to police that someone had broken into his locker at Shinnecock Hills Golf Club and stolen his $3,000 gold Omega Sea Master watch. Police have no suspects due to the lack of purple horseshoes.

* * *

Montauk mania continues this week. A DeForest Road resident called police after he was nearly mowed down on his own front lawn. He said he was talking with a friend while standing on his front lawn when a man he knew came barreling off the road in a car towards him "with fire in his eyes." A quick hop skip and a jump to the left and the near victim was missed. He called police but hasn't pressed charges.

* * *

Ooooh! That's a spicy meatball! Some derelicts threw tomato sauce at a Stirrup Court resident's front door in East Hampton last week. The man doesn't know who did it, but is suspecting kids of the marinating. Hey man, did you hear? Chef Boyardee's back in town.

It really hurts to have something dear to you stolen from you by some stranger who will never love that object as much as you have. The manager of the Sag Harbor Hertz car rental store on Sunset Beach Road called police when he realized that a car that had been rented September 1 had not been returned. The $25,769.70 white Ford Explorer will warrant a charge of grand larceny in the fourth degree to whom ever has not returned it.

FORE.... CLOSURE

Dear Dan,

It is a shame in a few weeks the Poxabogue Golf Center will be closed – forever. It helped fulfill the recreational needs of local families for over forty years.

I have looked at the model of the proposed 18 hole small Greens layout. It was commissioned by PGC. They hired top professionals in their fields. The results is a picturesque 18 hole, small to medium greens course, with small ponds and a stream throughout. The pars are 2-4, depending on the placement of the cups and the undulation of the greens. The entire course and parking lot will not be able to be seen from Rt. 27 because of a berm and a tight row of evergreens.

This is NOT typical roadside/boardwalk amusement miniature golf, as the opposition tried to make the public believe!

There are only a few weeks left. Please Patrick Heaney, Southampton Supervisor and the of our other board members find a way to stop another housing development on this open land. There must be a way. (What about buying the development rights?)

Save the Poxabogue 18.

GIVE A GHOST A HAND

Dear Dan,

I represent the Moriches Paquatuck Squaws whose primary concern is to raise money for Camp Paquatuck, a summer camp for handicapped children in Center Moriches. Our biggest fundraiser of the year is approaching rapidly, The Spooky Walk. We are seeking donations of food, beverages and/or money for food for the volunteers who give up their precious time for two weekends to hopefully make the event a success each year. I was wondering if you would care to donate to our event. We can provide a letter for tax write off purposes if need be. I hope to hear from you. Thanks.

SUV: SEGWAY UTILITY VEHICLE

Dear Dan,

Had my first Segway sighting two weeks ago. Spotted a policeman riding one through a terminal at Atlanta airport. I think you should get the inventor to give you one next summer in exchange for the PR exposure he'd get in the Hamptons. Give up your Triumph... it's so 20th Century. Take your straw hat and Segway along the bypasses to the bypasses.

BEMUSED BY BEWILDERING BIKES

Dear Dan,

Here's an update on the mysterious white bicycles. Last night, I saw one in the alley between the Sag Harbor Pharmacy and the Variety Store. Unlike my previous sighting in front of the American Hotel, this one was child-sized and unchained. I enjoy seeing them around the village and I hope they continue to mystify us. Thanks for all your amusing and informative stories.

WHO WANTS TO BE A MILLIONAIRE?

Dear Dan,

I would love for you to write a humorous story about the outrageously escalating real estate prices in the Hamptons. The following are my personal experiences this season. Let me preface this by telling you that I am a real estate attorney so I consider myself to be somewhat informed. I have been looking in the Westhampton area. In April, I saw a house, which was listed at $675,0000. It was not all that attractive looking and needed some interior updates. My husband hated it so we passed. In any event my research disclosed that similar houses in the area sold for no more than $560,000 as of September 2001. It did not sell and was taken off the market in June presumably for the owners or tenants to enjoy the summer season. However, it was back on the market in September for $795,000. What market indicators compelled this listing broker to raise the asking price by 20% in three months? Unbelievable! Another house was listed at $650,000. I saw it in July. One week later, my broker called to inform me that the listing agent raised the asking price to $795,000! The house had a great view but needed about $100,000 to bring it up to speed. The house across the street seemed abandoned and the most recent sale on the block was four years ago for $271,000. Will I ever get a house! I feel it's like buying stock in a dot com with no earnings. The stock market is tanking and the real estate prices get irrationally higher. Now that people have lost millions on Wall Street are they grabbing real estate at any price so they can have a tangible investment? I picture these new homeowners standing on there doorsteps of their new Hampton digs throwing dirt at their stockbrokers saying "That's all of Tara you'll ever see!" Dan, write an article, make me laugh because I will never get a house! Thanks.

Jeanne Jacobs

TWO FANS

Dear Dan,

I think I have figured out why I like Dan's Papers so much; it is the writing style of the articles. It is a wonderful thing for a person to have an unassuming nature. The feeling that comes across from the articles and the whole paper carries the unassuming friendliness of a small town and yet it is current, vital, and hip without ever a hint of pretentiousness. It is amazing that such a wonderful publication can be produced on a weekly basis by a relatively small staff. It's just plain fun to read! Keep up the good work Dan.

AND YET ANOTHER FAN

Dear Dan,

Very unique and interesting website.

Although I don't reside on the Island, I travel there on business (mortgage sales) and to visit my sister in Sayville. I will pick up hard copies in the city. Keep up the great work.

Dans' Papers' has the highest weekly circulation in the Hamptons, with free Manhattan distribution. Our website receives up to 800,000 hits a month, making Dans' site the most visited of the East End publications. With a Classified section the largest in the East End, it is second only to Newsday.

All ads in the Classified dept. are paid in full before scheduling or before submission to the art dept. We cannot be responsible for returning original artwork. Once Classified ads have been entered into the system and scheduled, we are not responsible for refunds. Please have ad composed before calling. Major changes after placement and scheduling require a new ad. Web ads usually appear Thursday by 6pm. Dans' Papers is not responsible for ommissions and misrepresentations appearing on the website.
